Tornado Rips N. Carolina Farms; 2 Die, Score Hurt

15 Homes in Ruins Near Windsor; Many Reported Missing, Hospital Crowded

By the Associated Press.

Windsor, N. C., Feb. 21.—A tornado dipped into the rural community of Green's Cross Roads near here late today, killed one aged farmer, injured a score or more and indirectly caused the death of Police Chief John W. Brown, 58, of Colerain.

Robert Laurence, 90, died late tonight of injuries suffered when the tornado demolished about 15 dwellings in the Green's Cross Roads area.

Police Chief Killed

Police Chief Brown was killed when his automobile collided with a bus immediately after the storm passed. The bus had been halted by a tree which had blown across a highway.

Residents and officers of the stricken area brought the injured to a hospital here. Hospital attendants said they feared three or four more suffered injuries that might prove fatal.

Patrolmen said the tornado first descended upon a roadway, cut a swath through the countryside and then moved back into the road where it played itself out.

School buses and every available car were pressed into service as the area was searched for victims.

Mrs. McKinley Connor, who lives in the path of the storm, was missing.

Windsor Hospital Crowded

The Windsor Hospital, where the injured were brought, was crowded to capacity. Cots and mattresses were brought from storage to care for the incoming patients.

Dr. F. H. Jarris, Bertie County health officer, said most of the injured persons suffered only lacerations and bruises.

Cold Wave Misses D. C.

Washington missed the brunt of a cold wave moving eastward yesterday but the mercury is expected to dip tonight, the Weather Bureau predicted last night.

While a cold wave gripped sections of the Midwest and brought a season's low of 10 degrees at Amarillo, Tex., Washington felt a low of 48 degrees. The forecast for today is cloudy and colder, possibly preceded by light rain. Still colder weather is forecast for tonight. A low of 33 was expected this morning.

Northwest winds expected to sweep a new cold wave into the District yesterday shifted to the northeast and north. The mercury climbed to 53 degrees at 2 p. m.

Flood warnings were issued from Towanda to Wilkes-Barre along the Susquehanna. The Ohio River was swollen 6 feet above flood stage at Paducah, Ky.

Italy's Press Warns Against Election Of 'Political Pope'

Vatican City, Feb. 21 (AP).—Speculation concerning the successor to Pope Pius XI turned today to the known or conjectured leanings of various cardinals as part of the Fascist press warned against the election of a "political pontiff."

Il Regime Fascista of Cremona indicated a non-Italian pope would be acceptable provided he were chosen from among the cardinals "who think only on religious problems."

Cardinals announced they would meet in conclave March 1, and that voting would begin on the following day.

Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, and two South American prelates, Cardinals Copello and Leme, were expected in time for the balloting.

16 as Minimum Bridal Age Asked In Maryland

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 21 (AP).—One of Maryland's four women legislators moved today to set up a State statute with "teeth" in it to ban child marriages.

Mrs. Vesta Cary, a delegate from Baltimore's Third District, introduced a bill in the General Assembly providing that no "female under the age of 16 years" could marry "under any circumstances." Between 16 and 18, the "female" would be required to secure consent of parent or guardian before marriage.

Jesse Jones Sends Ill Cat To Johns Hopkins Specialists

This is "Mr. White"

Bascom Timmons' Pet Travels Twice Weekly to Hospital For Treatment as 'Mr. White'

By the Associated Press.

"Mr. White" is a cat—a very special cat with one blue and one brown eye. Just now one of his front feet is discolored by blue-violet medicine, and a hind foot is bandaged.

It's pretty irksome for Mr. White. Twice a week he is carried 40 miles to Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore. There, renowned specialists treat his feet just as if he were a man and not a one-time alley cat.

They said Mr. White was very brave when a well-known surgeon operated on him recently to stem a mysterious blood-stream infection. But convalescence is trying, even for a 9-pound white cat. He hasn't been discharged yet, although Tommy Corcoran, New Deal adviser, who underwent an appendectomy on the same day, has left the hospital.

Bascom N. Timmons, newspaperman and former president of the National Press Club, adopted Mr. White after his wife found the tiny homeless kitten at Christmas time in 1936.

After several local cat specialists couldn't seem to get to the seat of the infection a report got around that Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and a close friend of Timmons, had arranged for a "Mr. White" to be admitted to Johns Hopkins. But only hospital officials and close friends knew that Jones' "Mr. White" was Timmons' cat.

Timmons' love of homeless cats is widely known. His famous "Timmie" was said to have been the most photographed cat in the world. When he died in 1936 at the age of 9, a national radio chain broadcast a tribute to him.

Pedestrian Control Survey To Go on Air

Post, WJSV Start Broadcasts Tonight On Reactions

All angles of the current pedestrian control question—as seen by the pedestrians themselves, the police, Congress and innocent bystanders—will be aired tonight and daily through Saturday by The Washington Post and Radio Station WJSV.

Preparing for the first in a series of programs—tonight from 7 to 7:15—the WJSV mobile recording unit made the rounds of congested downtown intersections yesterday with Representative William T. Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, as chief commentator. Schulte, responsible for instituting broadcasts from Traffic Court, is chairman of a special traffic sub-committee of the House.

Jam Around Truck

During yesterday's survey, Schulte renewed his proposals for an "absolute safety" period for pedestrians at traffic-clogged corners. He contended the present law was "half baked" in that it failed to provide pedestrians with iron-clad assurance of protection. He wants to amend the newly enacted rules to require all vehicular traffic to suspend movement until pedestrians at all corners of intersections have an opportunity to cross unmolested.

The mobile sound unit made its first stop at Thirteenth and F streets northwest right at the height of the evening rush hour. Several hundred persons jammed around the red and silver recording truck, most

Unity to Guard Liberties Urged By Roosevelt

Brotherhood Message Asks All Groups to Proclaim Joint Ideals

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt said last night all groups must unite in preserving for everyone the liberties guaranteed by the Constitution.

The President expressed his view in a message to Roger W. Straus, co-chairman of the National Conference of Christians and Jews. The message, which was read in a radio broadcast featuring brotherhood week, follows:

"Never has it been more essential that our people of every national origin, race or faith should proclaim those civic ideals that they hold in common and engage together in those activities that reflect their common social aims.

"Here in the United States, while maintaining the right to differ in our creeds, all groups must unite in maintaining for all, the liberties guaranteed by the American Constitution and in cultivating that mutual respect, friendship and co-operation across dividing lines, which will bind us together as a nation.

"It is my hope that the observance of brotherhood day this year will advance these ideals."

Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York, said in part:

"If anyone has ever questioned that the preservation of our liberties depends upon the maintenance of democracy as we understand it in America, the events of the past few months in countries across the seas must have removed all doubt."

Nation to Revere Washington Today, on His 207th Birthday

February mists rise once more this morning from the Potomac River, unveiling again at Mount Vernon the simple brick tomb where sleeps the tall, benevolent man who fathered a country.

Millions of Americans will pray today and play today because George Washington was born 207 years ago.

Dances, speeches and deaths on the highways—symbols of American holidays—again will tick off the birthday hours of the big-boned, gray-eyed Virginia gentleman.

Today the hopping robins deploy along the grass that slopes to the river from the pillared veranda of Mount Vernon. Each year spring is marked at the great estate when the robins eat the red berries from the holly tree on the river side of the mansion. Yesterday the tree had been pecked clean.

Near the west lodge gate, where Washington's servants watched the comings and goings at the big house, the children are beginning the year's baseball.

First base is a pine tree, a scrawny sapling is second, a sackful of dirt makes third base, and home plate is a criss-crossed scratch in the plantation earth.

Thousands of hushed, whispering persons will file through Mount Vernon's turnstiles today. Each of them will get a handbook that bears

Policy Game Abandoned, Warrings Say

Attorney O'Connell Withdraws Alibi; Quinlan Adjudged In Contempt

Emmitt Warring announced last night that he and his brothers are "through with the numbers for good."

The Warrings six years ago started a lottery which they built up into a $2,000,000-a-year business with 400 or 500 employes.

The venture brought also two trials of the Warrings for criminal conspiracy and culminated yesterday in impending jail terms for Emmitt and several others for jury fixing.

Justice Laws announced that on Friday he would sentence Emmitt Warring, two others who pleaded guilty of criminal contempt of court and a go-between whose defense was rejected by the court.

Quinlan Held in Contempt

The others pleading guilty were John B. Upperman, ousted deputy United States marshal, and Harry Fine, who carried to a juror Warring's $600 offer for an acquittal.

Justice Laws yesterday adjudged Thomas Harrison Quinlan in contempt, despite Quinlan's plea that his investigating two prospective jurors for Warring really did no harm.

The justice will pronounce verdicts Friday on Juror Carl T. Denekas, who was offered the $600, and Attorneys Harry T. Whelan and William B. O'Connell, who vigorously denied Upperman's story they paid him money bribes.

Paid $13,000 Yearly in Bribes

The Warrings ran their racket here for years without molestation. Their troubles began a year ago with an indictment for conspiring to defraud the Government of its income taxes on their profits. Their two trials brought out the fact that they treated as a business expense the bribery of Metropolitan policemen to the tune of $13,000 a year.

F. Joseph Donohue, who represented Emmitt Warring in the trial for jury corruption, issued this statement last night:

"My client authorizes me to deny emphatically the statement appearing in a local afternoon paper that he has sold his numbers business," adding Warring closed up his business because it didn't pay.

O'Connell Withdraws Alibi

"Warring thought in the beginning," the statement continued, "that it was a harmless business giving food-money to 400 or 500 . . . Had he known it would lead to jail he would never have engaged in the business; he now realizes what serious consequences can follow from what he had thought to be a harmless game."

Attorney O'Connell was the only witness to take the stand in the last of the jury-fixing hearings yesterday. He had denied before that he gave Upperman $10, as the dismissed marshal claims, and had said he was not in the courthouse on Friday night, December 2, 1938, when the first Warring jury was 24-Hour Cure For Gonorrhea Reported in N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 21.—A new way of using sulfanilamide to cure gonorrhea in 24 hours was reported today by Dr. Herman Goodman, of the New York City Health Department.

He said results suggest possibility of using the drug to immunize against this disease.

Sulfanilamide has required up to ten days and longer to effect a gonorrhea cure. Complete recoveries have been reported as 90 per cent or better.

The 24-hour treatment has been used on eight persons, all of whom, Dr. Goodman said, recovered in that short time. The short cut was made by combining sulfanilamide with two other standard treatments, vaccines and silver salts.

Senate Holds Up Pay for 4,200 in FHA

The Senate yesterday refused permission to the Federal Housing Administration to draw from its reserves sufficient funds to pay its 4,200 employes after March 1, and in so doing administered a sharp "spanking" both to Acting Budget Director Daniel W. Bell and the FHA.

Immediately after yesterday's session, Majority Leader Barkley said he was confident that when the independent offices bill—of which the FHA provisions form one section—comes out of conference later this week, it will contain the necessary approval of the $2,500,000 expenditure FHA officials deem necessary to keep the agency going through March and April.

The bulk of yesterday's debate on the bill, however, concerned the controversial appropriation for the proposed Watts Bar dam of the Tennessee Valley Authority, which received the stamp of Senate approval by a 49-31 vote. The roll call was on a motion by Senator Adams, "economy" Democrat, of Colorado, to eliminate a $4,252,000 allocation for Watts Bar in the general $39,003,000 appropriation for TVA purposes.

Gilbertsville Item Stays

Provision for continuation of the Gilbertsville Dam in Kentucky was retained in the bill without dissent, although a large part of the debate on the Adams motion actually revolved around the Kentucky project.

Senate action in respect to both FHA and TVA followed the Appropriations Committee's amendments to the House bill. As it was sent to the Senate from the House, the bill granted the FHA the required $2,500,000 allowance and also—because of a surprise Republican move that caught the Democrats napping—made no provision in the TVA section for the Gilbertsville and Watts Bar dams.

May "Shut Up Shop"

It is expected the appropriation for these dams, and for preliminary investigations for a dam site at Coulter Shoals, Tenn., will be retained in the bill when it emerges from conference.

Failure of the Senate to grant the FHA's request for the right to draw on its own funds in the next two months raised fear in some quarters that the agency may be forced practically to "shut up shop" for a few days early in March.

It is said FHA funds will be completely exhausted by March 2 or 3, and a hiatus of two or three days may be unavoidable between that date and the time the President signs the bill, which, in its final form, presumably will contain the necessary provision.

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, asserted that FHA officials told the appropriations committee that, when they noted last

Woodrow Wilson's Widow Cancels Trip on Nazi Boat

Her baggage aboard and her cabin filled with flowers and friends to wish her bon voyage, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson suddenly canceled a South American tour on the liner Bremen recently when a friend of the late President counseled against making the trip on a German boat, according to a well-authenticated story told in Washington yesterday.

Mrs. Wilson had planned to sail from New York on February 11 on the Bremen with Mrs. E. T. Meredith, widow of the Secretary of Agriculture in her husband's Cabinet. All plans had been made and friends had gathered to see them off, according to the story.

A friend of the late President and Mrs. Wilson, who had been with them in Paris during the peace conference, is said to have offered the suggestion that he believed the trip on the German boat inadvisable. Mrs. Wilson immediately returned to Washington "on business." Mrs. Meredith declined to comment on the story.

Continental Defense Revealed As Aim of Fleet's War Game

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 21.—President Roosevelt approached the fleet's war-game area today as a radio message from his flagship, the Houston, emphasized the broad continental defense problem involved.

"It may be emphasized," said the message from Capt. Daniel J. Callahan, Presidential naval aide, "that contrary to some stories the exercises are not being conducted in the Caribbean Sea, nor do they relate to defense of the Panama Canal, which is 1,500 or more miles west of the scene of this fleet problem."

The message added that the ship could not state its exact position because of its proximity to the scene of operations.

The message corrected an impression held by some that defense of the canal was the sole issue in "fleet problem 20." It was understood it embraced defense of the wide sweep from the South Atlantic Coast to South America.

The "black" fleet's mission apparently is to prevent the "white" invaders from establishing a base among the hundreds of islands in the West Indies or on the Atlantic Coast from which an air or sea attack may be launched.

Air Base Bill Offered To Keep Wars at Sea

U. S. Strength 5th, 5,500 Planes Needed, Wright Tells Forum

The National Air Forum was told yesterday that the frenzied efforts of European nations to arm had reduced the United States to fifth place in military aviation and that the present 5,500 plane program before Congress should be adopted to make the Nation secure.

Returning from a tour of European aircraft manufacturing centers, T. P. Wright, vice president of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, told leaders of Government and civilian aviation circles that the United States must first build military planes and then expand air research facilities for adequate defense.

German Leadership

"The overshadowing political influence of an air force possessed by one country greater than its near neighbors has been amply demonstrated in the past three years," Wright declared, "It has made necessary the policy of appeasement now followed by the European democracies."

Earlier, G. Grant Mason, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, declared the C. A. A. would help inaugurate increased flight service to South America to meet "alarming" foreign air transport raids there. He said the authority planned to install airway beacons on Latin-American routes to permit night schedules.

Mason said that a survey just completed revealed Germany now maintains more route miles of scheduled air transport service in South America than does the United States. Every country in South America, he added, is receiving international airline service by German, Italian, French or Dutch companies.

LaGuardia Urges Airports

Mayor LaGuardia of New York told several hundred delegates and guests at luncheon that the major East Coast army air base should be west of the Allegheny Mountains rather than at New York or elsewhere on the coast. The former World War flier warned against political "log-rolling" and lobbying in Congressional determination of sites for new army and navy air fields and city airports.

Predicting that aviation will grow so fast in the next few years that

Vinson Calls Navy's $53,800,000 Plan 'Reply to Dictators'

By Robert C. Albright.

A $53,800,000 program for development of naval aircraft facilities yesterday was laid before the House as America's answer to "the dictators in their own language" and notice that this Government will not submit to aggression.

As the House opened debate on improvements at Guam and creation and strengthening of a dozen other air and submarine bases in the mid-Pacific, the Alaskan area, the Caribbean and the Continental United States, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Affairs Committee, militantly called for nonpartisan approval.

Vinson said the object was to so strengthen the Navy "that any aggressor nation will be defeated long before he reaches our shores." He declared "the world might just as well know that America is not going to submit to being destroyed with other unprepared democracies."

An attack on the $5,000,000 Guam authorization was immediately launched, but party lines were broken, and House Minority Leader Martin announced the Republicans as a party would make no issue of it. Representative Fish, of New York, led the critical assault from the Republican side, while Representative Colmer (Democrat), of Mississippi, called it "the entering

Vast Loan Approved As Chamberlain Vows To Persuade Nations Of 'Folly of Course'

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Feb. 21.—The British government's record-breaking peacetime armaments expansion was approved in Commons tonight after Prime Minister Chamberlain had promised that eventually he would try to persuade other governments of the "folly of the course that we are all pursuing and induce them to put an end to a situation which, if it is persisted in, must bring bankruptcy to every country in Europe."

Labor leaders were unable wholeheartedly to oppose the armament program inasmuch as Laborites have been insistent on a strong stand against Germany, Italy, and Japan.

However, the Laborites did argue that the government would not have to spend so many millions on guns if Downing Street had been faithful to the League of Nations and had resisted aggression years ago in Manchuria and Abyssinia. Accordingly, the Laborites moved for a nominal reduction in the arms appropriation. This motion, equivalent to a vote of censure, was defeated, 310-127, by the Conservative majority which then added a vote of confidence in the program.

Government Free to Borrow

The government is now free to borrow £800,000,000 ($3,760,000,000) toward the cost of its five-year arms program which, when completed in 1942, probably will cost more than £2,000,000,000 ($9,400,000,000). Indeed, Chamberlain hinted today that next year he may have to ask Parliament to authorize an increase in the loan beyond the £800,000,000 ($3,760,000,000) limit. The defense cost for the coming fiscal year will be £580,000,000 ($2,726,000,000) in taxes and loans.

Defending the arms bill, Chamberlain told the Commons "it is no use in present circumstances to appeal to the League of Nations. We have now to trust to other means of maintaining peace and keep this country safe."

Chamberlain admitted it would be "criminal to allow the situation to go on developing as it has been developing without making some determined effort to stop it." But he was not confident that a world disarmament conference would be successful at this time.

"If I could believe that such a conference could produce an effective result at this moment, I would not hesitate to call it," he said.

Attlee Attacks Chamberlain

"A conference which failed would be worse than no conference, and I feel that before it is possible to anticipate success from such a conference we must be sure that those who go to it would go with good will and with a determination to produce the desired results."

Maj. Clement Richard Attlee, Labor Party leader, attacked Chamberlain for "unwarrantable complacency," and "most brazen effrontery." He said Britain must pay millions now as the price for having a government that adandoned collective security and failed to protect Manchuria, Abyssinia and Czecho-Slovakia. He accused Chamberlain of "trying to put sob stuff over this house."

Winston Churchill, leading Conservative Party critic of the government, said the "overwhelming weight of British opinion and of American opinion, which was now so potent a factor for averting war, accepted the position that the best chance of averting war was the accumulation of deterrents."

Britain's arms expansion was one deterrent, Churchill said, and "what was happening across the Atlantic

$2,000 to Set Up 'Blood Bank' Ready for Children's Hospital

More than $2,000 will be turned over to Children's Hospital for the establishment of a permanent blood and serum "bank" as a result of the St. Valentine's week card and game parties. The parties were under the joint sponsorship of The Washington Post, Station WJSV and the American Contract Bridge League.

Miss Mattie M. Gibson, Children's Hospital superintendent, greeted the committee's announcement with a promise that the "bank" itself will be installed, equipped and operating within the next few days.

"And no one will be able to realize fully," Miss Gibson said yesterday, "how grateful we at the hospital are to the community for its prompt and generous response to the plea for this fund.

"Right now, at this particular season of the year, the need for such a 'bank' is greatest. Without the fund raised at the St. Valentine's week parties, our 'bank' could not—for several more months, perhaps—have been fully equipped and stocked with the life-saving and health-returning serum and blood supplies for which we will have so many calls during the coming several weeks of in-between-seasons weather.

"With this $2,000 made immediately available, I can promise that our 'bank' will begin to pay back dividends to the sick and suffering youngsters of the community before another week has passed."

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

SNAPSHOTS OF GW

Under fire in his second term (like other Presidents) George Washington once exploded at a Cabinet meeting and passionately exclaimed: "By God, I'd rather be in my grave; I'd rather be on my farm than be made emperor of the world."

GW . . . grandeur

On his frontier campaigns he sometimes wore Indian garb . . . Once an Indian shot at him point blank and, according to his diary, he "took the Indian into custody" . . . The Indians called him Conoctocarius, which means destroyer of villages.

* * * *

GW invited his mother to come and live with h'm, and then enumerated five good reasons why she wouldn't enjoy it . . . As a tenderfoot he once undressed to sleep in a frontier tavern; the bugs showed him why the other woodsmen had not undressed.

"—no flu from icy river"

Once he was thrown off a raft into 10 feet of ice filled water . . . He was a little appalled by Indians who spoke French and Dutch . . . One of the greatest tributes ever paid him was that he was kind to his inferiors and condescending to his equals.

* * * *

He tried to get to church once a month, but in the first six months of 1773 attended church only twice . . . yet in a crisis he was apt to spend a whole day in church and fasting, and he told his officers that they must go to church along with the soldiers.

* * * *

After his first defeat, his campaign managers gave away 300 gallons of liquor in his second and successful campaign for the legislature . . . Later he learned to be reluctant to take public office . . . He was a major at 20 and a colonel at 22½.

* * * *

Once while President he brought a bowl of hot tea with his own hands to a sick guest . . . He wore a brown suit and white stockings when first inaugurated, and was the only President to wear a sword at his inaugural.

* * * *

While his army was in New England, he scathingly rebuked soldiers who were about to follow the old (and at that time prevalent) New England tradition of burning the Pope in effigy . . . On March 17, 1776, he issued orders that the counter sign was to be "St. Patrick."

"—he forbade a burning"

Once he ordered a suit of clothes in London without sending measurements; just for a 6-footer, not very heavy . . . The Whisky Rebellion angered him, and he sent 15,000 militiamen to put it down . . . He gave Nellie Custis a $1,000 harpsichord . . . Once he complained bitterly to a London agent because another planter was getting a half penny more for tobacco no better than his.

Jefferson called George Washington's mind "great and powerful without being of the first order" . . . He spent whole days at writing letters . . . He kept 30 Windsor chairs on the front porch at Mount Vernon for company—and now there isn't one on the front porch of the White House.

* * * *

He was human, but almost every act revealed the grandeur of his character. He loved farming more than fighting, and was one of the great scientific farmers of his day. Before going into battle he always mapped out the line of his retreat should things go amiss . . . Like other Presidents, he had a hot temper, but he controlled it well and was a great conciliator.

Inquiry Sought Into Unregistered Foreign Agents

By the Associated Press.

The Department of Justice has been asked to investigate reports that supposed agents of foreign principals have failed to register with the State Department.

Failure to register is punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment of not more than two years, or both.

The State Department did not say how many cases had been submitted, but it was reliably learned there were ten.

Senate Confirms Arant as Judge

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Dean Herschel W. Arant of Ohio State University's law school as a Federal judge for the Sixth Circuit.

Other nominations approved were: United States attorneys—Horace Fierson, jr., Middle District of Tennessee; John T. Cahill, Southern District of New York, and Edmund J. Brandon, District of Massachusetts.

Nazis Call Bund Melee A 'Challenge'

Pittman Speech Brings New Attack From German Press

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 21.—The Nazi press today interpreted disturbances at a German-American Bund meeting in New York last night as a "challenge to Germandom in America."

The entire press gave prominent display to the Madison Square Garden German-American Bund mass meeting and attendant disturbances, but with the exception of Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' newspaper, Der Angriff, confined comment to headlines.

The story brought by DNB, official news agency, appeared under such two-column headlines as "Jewish Terror in New York," "Battle for Free America," and "Settling Accounts with Jewish Agitators in New York."

Der Angriff described the disturbances as "a new attempt of Jewry to express . . . its hate and revenge," and declared that the German people and "all civilized nations" learned of them with indignation.

Pittman Stirs Attack

The press campaign against President Roosevelt, meanwhile, received new impetus in comments on the Washington radio address last night of Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung said of the speech (in which Pittman assailed totalitarian states and said the American people were not afraid to die for "Christianity, morality, justice and liberty"):

"The Christianity and morals of this North American Senator are best characterized by his earlier utterances, according to which no one need be struck dead who can be starved to death."

In a long article entitled "Entanglements At the Time of Washington's Birthday," the newspaper concluded:

"If Roosevelt now translates his aggressive anti-Fascist views about world politics into the practice of an armament program . . . and in addition allows his own armament industry to work for France and England, then all the facts of unprovoked, systematic intervention are at hand which, despite all attempts to belittle its significance today, is alarming all America."

"Entanglement is a fact, Washington's warnings (against foreign entanglement) are more real than ever, and Europe has a burning interest in knowing whether and how the disturbed balance of United States politics will be restored."

FBI Inquiry Demanded

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—A Federal investigation of the pro-Nazi rally in Madison Square Garden was demanded today by a local American Legion official, while city authorities manifested a feeling of relief that general rioting had not developed.

The demand was made by Col. Lewis Landes, who also said he had asked United States Attorney General Murphy to take a hand. Murphy, said Landes, had promised to give the matter "careful consideration."

Isadore Greenbaum, 26, a hotel employe, who rushed at Fritz Kuhn, National German-American Bund leader, during the latter's speech and was beaten by Bund "Storm Troopers," was charged with disorderly conduct and released after payment of a $25 fine by his friends. He disavowed any friendship for communism, explaining:

". . . they talked so much against my religion and there was so much persecution I lost my head."

James Wheeler-Hill, the Bund's New York unit chairman, said $8,476.50 was collected at the rally and would be used "for the extension of our newspaper chain."

The Bund publishes papers in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago and Los Angeles, he said, and weeklies in English will be started in Minneapolis, Boston and Seattle.

Right to Meet Upheld

By the Associated Press.

Members of Congress disagreed yesterday as to whether such organizations as the German-American Bund should be permitted to hold public meetings.

Reaction to the stormy session of the bund in New York varied from a statement by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, that he favored "concentration camps for those trying to spread un-American propaganda" to an assertion by Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, that "any group has a right to hold a meeting so long as it is legally authorized."

One Republican Senator, who asked that his name not be used, said "I detest this kind of meeting but I'd fight like hell to let them hold it."

Senator Holman (Republican), of Oregon, a member of the Senate Immigration Committee, said the New York disturbance had raised a question in his min dwhether or not immigration should be stopped altogether "until we can assimilate the discordant elements already here."

France Welcomes Speech

Paris, Feb. 21 (AP).—French diplomatic circles today welcomed a speech by Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, against totalitarian states as another indication of the ending of the traditional isolationist attitude of the United States

The Gallup Poll

American Aid to England, France in Event Of War Favored by Most of Both Parties in U.S.

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

New York, Feb. 21.—A majority of American voters believe that if there were a war in Europe tomorrow between Great Britain and France on one side and Germany and Italy on the other, the United States should do everything possible to help England and France win, except go to war herself.

GEORGE GALLUP

This fact, revealed in the final results of a survey on foreign policy, by the American Institute, may indicate an important trend of public opinion away from the traditional policy of isolation. American sympathy for the European democracies and dislike of the dictators has now apparently reached the point where the voters would want to find some way of sending aid to their biggest World war allies, shortof actual military support, in time of war.

The Institute conducted its national survey of voters on the issue raised after President Roosevelt's conference with the Senate Military Affairs Committee two weeks ago:

"If Germany and Italy go to war against England and France, do you think we should do everything possible to help England and France win, except go to war ourselves?

The vote is:

Yes	69%
No	31

Only 6 per cent said they had not yet informed an opinion on the issue.

Especially significant is the vote by parties. It shows that sentiment among the rank and file of Republicans is almost identical with sentiment among Democrats. If Republican leaders seek to make a party issue of the foreign policy question—and there are already indications that they may—the rank and file of Republican voters may not share their views at this time. The party vote in the survey is:

	Help England and France? Yes.	No.
Democrats	71%	29%
Republicans	69	31
Other party voters	65	35

Other Institute surveys have found that public sentiment is against America going to war. But the majority, as shown in the present study, would not favor the other extreme either—complete aloofness from Europe's quarrels—if the European democracies were faced with disaster.

One reason for this sentiment is made clear by a second question in the Institute survey. Voters were asked:

"If Germany and Italy defeated England and France in a war, do you think Germany and Italy would then start a war against the United States?"

The vote is:

Yes	62%
No	38

Approximately one voter in every six had formed no opinion on this question.

While many military experts doubt that the dictator powers could successfully invade the United States after they had fought an exhausting war in Europe, the results do indicate a feeling on the part of many voters that American interests would be much less secure if the Fascist powers triumphed abroad. Earlier Institute studies show that the public regards Hitler's military and economic ambitions as virtually limitless. Most voters feel that giving colonies to Germany will not appease the Nazi regime, and when the public was asked whether they believed Hitler's statement that he has no more territorial ambitions in Europe, 92 per cent replied "no."

Opinions on giving aid to England and France shows practically no variation by age groups. Voters of all ages from 21 and up are approximately 7 to 3 in favor of it. There is some variation by income groups, however—the poorer voters being less inclined to give aid abroad than the middle and upper class voters. The actual vote is:

	Help England and France? Yes.	No.
Upper income group	73%	27%
Middle income group	70	30
Lower income group	66	34

The issue still to be settled is how far the public thinks the United States can go in aiding England and France without being drawn into a war herself. In the next few weeks the Institute will conduct a series of surveys to determine what specific action the voters would consider relatively safe.

Dewey to Probe Metropolitan Vote Forgeries

Subpenas 2 Agents Who Revealed Practice In SEC Investigation

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey has subpenaed Edward Schurr and Bruno Silbiger, two agents of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., who testified on February 8 before the Administration's monopoly committee that they had forged the names of policyholders to ballots issued in connection with the company's biennial election of directors, it was learned yesterday.

Dewey, it was learned, asked the Securities and Exchange Commission last week for the transcript of the Schurr and Silbiger testimony. The revelations of these two witnesses was the sensation of the monopoly hearings. Later the SEC brought witnesses from Philadelphia, New Jersey and Pittsburgh who testified to similar practices.

It was said that section 889 of the New York penal code might be interpreted to apply to such a case. It relates to third-degree forgery, which is punishable by five years imprisonment.

At the hearings here Gerhard Gesell, special SEC counsel, brought from Schurr statements that he would be given "somewheres around 50 ballots by the manager, usually at an open meeting and asked that we have them signed by the policyholders, witnessed and insert the policy number applying to that individual and then we would return them to the office."

When the policyholders displayed "resistance" to signing the ballots, Schurr said, or he was pressed for time, "it was a practice more or less to sign them for one another."

2 Liners' Conversion To Transports Planned

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Bids for conversion of the former Munson liners Pan America and Western World into United States Army transports will be invited next week, Col. James H. Laubach, superintendent here for the transport service, announced today.

The two ships, of 13,700 gross tons each, will replace the 7,555-ton transports Chateau Thierry and St. Mihiel.

House Votes To Continue Export Bank

G. O. P. Fear of Leading Nation Into War Fails To Limit Loan Power

By the Associated Press.

A bill to continue the Export-Import Bank for two years emerged unscathed from a partisan scrap in the House yesterday and was dispatched to the Senate by a vote of 280 to 77.

Raising cries that the bank might lead the Nation into war by making loans to belligerent countries, Republicans tried to kill off the agency, and when that maneuver failed, to limit its activities. Every attempt was brushed aside.

The bill would advance the date the bank's powers expire from June 30, 1939, to June 30, 1941. It also would place a $100,000,000 limit on the amount of loans the bank may have outstanding.

Commodity Credit Extended

Another provision would continue the Commodity Credit Corporation for the same period and raise its borrowing capacity from $500,000,000 to $900,000,000.

(This corporation was set up to lend money to farmers "to finance the carrying and orderly marketing of agricultural commodities," the Export-Import Bank was established to finance trade with foreign nations and United States dependencies.)

The Senate banking committee approved an almost identical bill yesterday. In that committee, too, Republican criticism was directed at the measure on grounds the export-import bank loans were made to implement foreign policy.

2 Democrats Against It

Only two Democrats in the House, Cannon, of Missouri, and Ludlow, of Indiana, went along with the Republicans on a roll call vote by which the latter attempted to forbid loans in excess of $5,000,000 annually to any country outside the Western Hemisphere except with the consent of Congress and prevent loans, except with Congressional approval, to aid the export of airplanes, arms and munitions owned or intended for use of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

Tumulty Mum On Story by Mrs. Wilson

Refuses Comment on Tale He 'Fabricated' Telegram Aiding Cox

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the War President, in the tenth installment of her story, "As I Saw It," tells how her husband repudiated a "fabricated" telegram implying indorsement of Gov. James M. Cox for the 1924 Democratic Presidential nomination, and how Joseph P. Tumulty confessed to writing the telegram but begged to be saved from exposure and "ruin." The story is published in the Saturday Evening Post.

Mr. Tumulty, long President Wilson's secretary and now a Washington lawyer, last night gave The Washington Post the following statement:

"I am the only living person whom Mrs. Wilson has singled out for contumely and disdain, and in view of the legion of the dead whom she has equally criticized, and who cannot reply, I am very glad to keep my silence at this time."

Called Story "Fabrication"

The time, Mrs. Wilson writes, was early April, 1922, 13 months after the Wilsons had moved to S street. Tumulty, she narrates, asked Wilson to send a message to a Jefferson Day banquet in New York, but Wilson refused, thinking it too early to break his silence.

To his astonishment, according to the widow, Wilson read in the newspapers that a message, purporting to be from him, had been read at the banquet indicating that he indorsed Cox.

Wilson branded the message "an absolute fabrication," she says. Tumulty, according to Mrs. Wilson's story, came down from New York, talked to her brother, Wilmer Bolling, and told him that he had written the telegram, thinking he was "acting for Mr. Wilson's best interests," and had arranged for a young woman to read it at the banquet.

Wilson Refused Help

Wilmer, according to Mrs. Wilson, went on to tell her about his talk with Tumulty:

"He begged me to go to you with this message: 'For God's sake help him,' for, he says, if this is published, it will ruin him and disgrace his wife and little children."

Wilson, according to the story, saw no disgrace or ruin in an exposure, and directed Bolling to tell Tumulty to take his medicine, saying:

"Go tell him just what I say. I know Tumulty. He is like a child, and will soon react."

Tumulty's public explanation, according to Mrs. Wilson's story, was not enough, and her husband had to issue a sharp statement emphasizing that he did not send any message to the banquet. Tumulty, she said, did not visit the S street house for ten months, and then it was the day before her husband died.

White Proposes 11-Man FCC Instead of Trio

A Federal communications comsion of 11 members, with a division of five commissioners in charge of radio broadcasting, was proposed yesterday by Senator White (Republican), of Maine, as a substitute for the McNinch-Wheeler bill to set up a commission of three with authority centralized in the chairman.

The measure was introduced as Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, indicated a willingness to amend the bill drafted by Chairman Frank R. McNinch, of the FCC, to make it provide for five rather than three commissioners.

The White bill, like the Wheeler measure, would end the service of all seven members of the present commission and provide for appointment of the eleven commissioners for six-year terms.

Let Constitution Alone, Rotary Hears Bloom Urge

Celebrating Washington's Birthday, the Rotary Club of Washington yesterday heard Rep. Sol Bloom, of New York declare the American Constitution should be left unchanged.

Bloom presented to the club the only reproduction of the Bill of Rights. Months were necessary for Grant Leet, club member, to clean the original enough to make the reproduction, he said.

Col. Walter W. Burns, regimental commander, 260th Coast Artillery, read Washington's Farewell Address. A. F. E. Horn presided.

Child's Bones Find Revives Convicts' Tale of 3 Murders

By the Associated Press.

Salem, Oreg., Feb. 21.—Spurred by discovery of a child's bones on a Texas ranch, authorities checked anew today the bizarre story of Claud and Elmer Tenison, brothers serving 18 years each in Oregon Penitentiary for bank robbery, that they had killed J. M. Cone near Perryton, Tex., seven years ago, because he failed to pay $1,000 he had promised them for slaying his two sons, J. M. Cone, jr., 10, and Vernon Cone, 6.

Authorities discounted the story at that time. Saturday, however, the bones were found 25 miles southeast of Perryton, at about the place where the Tenisons told authorities, the Cone children had been buried.

State parole board members questioned Claud, 40, and Elmer, 42, yesterday and said they repeated their story.

At Perryton Sheriff Talley said, "I think they may be the bones of one of the Cone children, but I don't know."

School Bill Hits At Armed Robbery

Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, member of the District Committee, yesterday requested Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal to draft a bill to increase the penalty for armed robbery.

Schulte, a victim of local robbers last year, asked a minimum sentence of five years upon conviction of robbery with a gun and a minimum sentence of a year for failure to register a gun.

Hatch Seeks to Ban Politics in Relief

Revision of the Federal corrupt practices act and other laws restricting political activities of officeholders was proposed yesterday by Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, chairman of a Senate Privileges and Elections sub-commitee.

Hatch held a meeting of his group yesterday as a first move toward drafting permanent legislation banning politics in relief and the Government service generally.

Oh, Say Can Ya See 144 Square Feet of Flag Lost at Dance

The Lido Civic Club is looking for 144 square feet of symbolism.

Last Thursday while the local association of Italian-American businessmen was holding a stag oyster roast at the Mayflower Hotel, all lights in the ballroom were dimmed.

When normal illumination was restored, the club's gold and lavender banner, with Venetian lion rampant over the Capitol, was no longer draped over the balcony.

The disappearance was attributed to sheer joie de vivre on the part of some club member, but Lido officials are offering a $10 reward for return, no questions asked.

Federal Forum Hears Overholser

Psychiatry is as much concerned with prevention of mental illness as with treatment, Dr. Winfred Overholser, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, told the Community Chest Federal Forum yesterday.

For every person who enters the hospital, there are two or three in the community who could be benefitted by psychiatric treatment, he said.

Ex-Prosecutor Admits Hearing Schultz Aided Him

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 21.—William C. Dodge, Democratic predecessor of Thomas E. Dewey as New York County district attorney, acknowledged today he had heard Gangster Dutch Schultz contributed $30,000 to his 1933 campaign but heatedly insisted "I don't believe it to this day."

The testimony, given under cross-examination by Dewey in the second policy racket trial of James J. Hines, climaxed a day-long verbal battle between the present and former prosecutors and led to two demands by defense counsel for a mistrial. Both were denied by Judge Charles C. Nott, jr.

Civic Association Protests Ban on Marian Anderson

The Pleasant Plains Civic Association filed yesterday its protest against the Board of Education's refusal to permit Marian Anderson, noted colored singer, use of Central High School auditorium for a concert.

Supt. of Schools Frank W. Ballou was accused of overthrowing "many of the finer school policies maintained prior" to his administration.

The board's stand was described as "savoring of bigotry, hypocrisy and un-Americanism."

Funds

year their funds would be inadequate because of increased duties, they were advised by the director of the budget to spend the money they had and then apply for more. The FHA followed this advice, which, Byrnes said, the budget director had no right to give.

Pays Its Own Way

Byrnes added that Chairman Glass of the Appropriations Committee has written Bell, asking an explanation, but "to this day your committee has not had an answer."

One Government official, when he heard the Senate had left the matter to be settled in conference, declared: "It's ironic that they pick out for a spanking the one Federal agency that pays its own way."

In the floor fight on the TVA proposals, Senator Barkley asserted it would be "unbusinesslike and foolish" to stop work now on the Gilbertsville Dam, on which $5,000,000 already has been expended. The dam "would have meant the difference between safety and disaster to thousands and thousands of people" in the 1937 floods, he shouted.

Senator Adams said that eliminations of Watts Bar would be a "start toward reducing the Government's vast expenditures," while Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, told the Senate that "the least we can do" is to prevent "any new subsidies and new expenditures until we have found some way to pay for those we already have."

Harrison for Delay

Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, charged that Francis Biddle, Philadelphia attorney who was formerly counsel for the TVA investigating committee, had been appointed by President Roosevelt to the Third Circuit Court as a "reward" for "one-sided" service in the investigation.

While the "economy" bloc of Senate Democrats, headed by Senators Adams, Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Harrison, of Mississippi, opposed Watts Bar, Minority Leader McNary, of Oregon, favored it. Senator Harrison explained to The Post last night that "I am very much in favor of the Tennessee Valley development, but I feel that the provision for one dam (Gilbertsville) this year would be enough. We could provide for the other one (Watts Bar) next year. We must consider the state of the Treasury."

The Senate will complete consideration of the independent offices bill today.

Keep Filipino Ties, Senate Is Urged

By the Associated Press.

Opposition to altering the Philippines independence act developed in the Senate Territories Committee yesterday in the face of a warning that abrupt severance of all ties might involve the United States in a Far Eastern conflict.

The warning was voiced by Francis B. Sayre, Assistant Secretary of State, who advocated legislation to prolong preferential trade relations 15 years after the islands become politically independent. Independence is now scheduled for 1946.

Minimum Pay Urged For Farmers by Law

By the Associated Press.

Edward E. Kennedy, an Illinois farm union leader, said yesterday the Government should extend to Agriculture the principlaes of minimum income control exercised in such industrial legislation as the wage-hour act.

Kennedy, witness at House Agriculture Committee hearings on general farm legislation, asserted agriculture had been "left out" when the Government decided to exercise these regulatory powers.

Housewife Approves City's New Pedestrian Laws

In a Washington Post-sponsored radio interview yesterday over Station WJSV, Reporter Howard F. Wentworth asked walkers from all walks of life what they thought of the new pedestrian laws. Above—Wentworth (left) gets an approval from Mrs. W. G. Pollard, local housewife, while other pedestrians look on of them eager and anxious to expound their views on success or failure of the District's attempts to regular pedestrians.

Dorothy Patjeans, of New York City, said she has been here long enough to compare pedestrian habits with her home city and expressed amazement at the willingness of Washington walkers to abide by the new rules.

"In New York," she said, "people don't pay any attention to walking regulations."

Predicts Few Arrests

Policeman Ralph Moody, assigned to the busy intersection to "educate" pedestrians in the whys and wherefores of the new rules, took time out to predict that very few arrests will be made when actual enforcement begins March 10.

"Although some people act like absent minded professors when they cross streets, I don't believe arrests will be necessary after they learn what is expected of them under the control laws," he said.

Moving down F street, observers with the WJSV outfit found few—if any—persons observed sections of the new law which prohibit pedestrians from crossing in the middle of blocks while vehicles are approaching close enough to "constitute a hazard." The center of F street between Twelfth and Thirteenth streets reminded one of the Union Station concourse—litterly droves of pedestrians darted and dashed through moving traffic lines from curb to curb.

Boy Scouts to Aid

The Post and WJSV will continue to seek public opinion during the pedestrian "education" period and will present to their readers and listeners first hand accounts of progress before and after the law actually becomes effective with penalties for violations. Results of yesterday's recording tour will be reported on WJSV's 7 to 7:15 p. m. period tonight.

At the same time yesterday, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, announced that beginning Saturday he will have the aid of 150 local Boy Scouts to help out in the educational program.

The uniformed boys, all between the ages of 14 and 18 and especially trained for the job, will augment police details at the more congested corners. They will instruct pedestrians in the proper method of crossing streets, but will in no way attempt to enforce or interpret the new rules, Brown said.

Washingtonians should propose more stringent penalties for drunken driving, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday, if they expect to be successful in reducing traffic accidents.

"Drunken driving in my State is a felony," he said, "and a man thinks twice before he mixes alcohol and gasoline. Here it's just a misdemeanor."

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents John Charles Thomas, with Carroll Hollister as assisting artist, in a song recital Tuesday evening in Constitution Hall. Program of songs by Erich Wolff, Henri Duprac, Rene Baton, Francis Poulenc, Alexander Koshetz, Beatrice Fenney, Albert Hay Malotte and Robert MacGimsey, and operatic arias by Massenet, Wagner, Mozart and Verdi.

Admirers of John Charles Thomas crowded Constitution Hall last evening to applaud tumultuously every song which the distinguished American barytone offered them in his well-planned and interesting program. Their enthusiasm questioned not what he sang, but vented itself with equal zeal after an unfamiliar lyric or such a popular extra number as "Largo al factotum." It must be said for the singer that most of his selections belonged in the category of the unknown as far as the majority of his auditors were concerned. He certainly did not cater to that part of the public which likes only what it already knows.

He began with five lieder by Erich Wolff, the talented and ill-starred Viennese composer, who died in 1913 at the early age of 38 in New York while touring as accompanist for Julia Culp. The legacy of 60 songs which he left the world is becoming gradually known through the medium of artists, who, like Mr. Thomas, appreciate their genuine poetic values. Those which Mr. Thomas sang with fine interpretative fervor were: "Drum sollst du dulden, Mansch," "Sommernacht," "Alle Dinge haben Sprache," "Es ist alles wie ein wunderbarer Garten" and "Und alles gehoeret uns."

In his group of operatic arias, he included only one which everyone knew, "O du mein holder Abendstern" from "Tannhaeuser." The others were "La paix soit avec vous," from the first scene of Massenet's "Thais," the serenade from the second act of Mozart's "Don Giovanni" (which, for some unaccountable reason, he sang in French), and "Per me giunto" from Verdi's "Don Carlos."

A group of French songs contained Henri Duparc's "Lamento" and "Le Manoir de Rosamunde," Rene Baton's "Nuit d'Autrefois" and a rollicking chanson, "La Belle Jeunesse," by Francis Poulenc. His concluding group in English included Alexander Koshetz' adaptation of a waltz by Arenski, Beatrice Fenney's "When Children Pray," Albert Hay Malotte's wistful and imaginative "Dreamer," and Robert MacGimsey's "Daniel in the Lions' Den."

The sonority and robustness of Mr. Thomas' voice was continuously in evidence. His vigor is wearing the velvet from his tones, and on more than one occasion toward the close of the recital his pianissimo was faint almost to the point of inaudibility.

No small amount of one's pleasure in the recital came from the admirable ease and flexibility of Carroll Hollister's memorized accompaniments. Not only is he a collaborator of consummate tact and alert consentience, but also a captivating pianist in his own right, as he proved in a group of solo pieces, including Saint-Saens' amplification of a bourree by Bach, Debussy's "La Soiree dans Grenade" and Manuel de Falla's "Danza ritual del fuego."

Paderewski Debarks On 20th U. S. Tour

Suitor Is Jailed In Strangle Death

The brutal murder of Daisy Bell Willis, colored, 34, was solved by investigators yesterday with confession of a 24-year-old suitor. She was found strangled February 10 at her home, 1009 Twentieth street northwest.

The suspect said he choked her when she attempted to cut him with a knife.

deliberating. Two Treasury agents said O'Connell was there.

O'Connell yesterday withdrew his previous testimony and said he was mistaken; that his impression he was not at the courthouse was based on statements of his family and friends that he was eating dinner and paying calls elsewhere.

"I'm coming to think I was here," said O'Connell.

Quinlan had admitted that Emmit Warring sent for him and caused him to investigate whether two jurors called in the Warring case could be influenced. When Justice Laws ordered him cited for contempt, Quinlan pleaded that what he had done was too remote from the court to constitute an obstruction of justice.

Former Judge Michael Doyle, in closing the arguments for O'Connell, depended largely on the testimony of Upperman, who, Doyle said, "was discredited by his own admission that he took bribes." Doyle also described Upperman as "a broken man who has aged 15 years in the last two weeks."

District Attorney Pine and Assistant District Attorneys Fihelly and Wilson yesterday ended a three-week siege on the Warring case.

Since Justice Laws initiated the jury-fixing investigation they have interviewed dozens of witnesses tracked down by Police Lieut. Earle Hartman and Plainclothes Officer Allan Baker.

Pine allowed the case to go under advisement without arguing the facts. He said his staff had investigated every fact and presented all the evidence that had been unearthed.

Churchill said the United States had hailed Chamberlain's recent declaration of solidarity with France. He suggested this sweeping declaration should be followed up by detailed technical arrangements between the British and French general staffs, and that in the event of war, Britain should intervene promptly with her naval, army and air power.

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—W. S. Morrison, chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, speaking for Baron Chatfield, minister of co-ordination of defense, disclosed today the British and French general staffs were working on a joint inclusive plan to make effective use of all the two nation's resources—men, munitions and war potentials—in event the two are involved in war.

Morrison said "the government fully agrees . . . that, once involved in war, we could not proceed upon a principle of limited liability."

Members of Parliament took that to mean that a British expeditionary force would be dispatched to France's aid if she were attacked, as was done in the World War.

Paris Decides To Recognize Franco's Spain

To Consult Him on Envoy; Loses All Points in Dispute

By John Elliott.

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Feb. 21.—Senator Leon Berard, official French emissary to Burgos, will return to the insurgent capital tomorrow, instructed by the French government to reach an agreement providing for the establishment of normal diplomatic relations between France and insurgent Spain.

Inspired comment makes it clear that the French government has already decided in principle on according de jure recognition to Gen. Franco and that an official decision in this sense will be taken this week-end.

In its final diplomatic test of strength with Franco, the French government has come out second best. It has received satisfaction on none of the three points it has put up to Franco.

The insurgent leader will listen to no peace terms and insists on the unconditional surrender of the republicans. He declines to offer general amnesty and, declines to give any pledge not to align himself with the totalitarian powers.

The deciding factor in France recognizing Franco is pressure from Britain, which is determined to establish regular diplomatic relations with Burgos.

The next interview between Berard and Franco's foreign minister, Count Jordana, has been postponed until Thursday, as Jordana cannot return to Burgos before then from Barcelona, where Franco made a state entry today.

Berard will reach Paris Friday, and either Saturday or Monday Daladier will call a meeting of the French Cabinet, which will decide to send an ambassador to Burgos. Announcement of recognition of the insurgent government will then be made simultaneously by the British and French governments.

As soon as the French government announces its recognition of Franco's government, Manuel Azana is expected to leave the Spanish Embassy in Paris to announce his resignation as president of the Spanish republic.

As Franco has intimated that he would prefer to have a military man instead of a civilian as French envoy in Burgos, the name of Gen. Catroux, commander of French troops in Algeria, has been mentioned as the leading candidate for the post.

Reich, Czech Firms Low Bidders for Mexican Contract

Mexico City, Feb. 21 (AP).—The government-controlled newsprint agency, Pipsa, today published a statement that one Czecho-Slovak and two German firms were lowest bidders on machinery for the agency's projected $1,600,000 manufacturing plant. The low bidders were Skoda, of Czecho-Slovakia, and Wagner Maschineenfabrik & Siemens, of Germany. Contracts have not yet been awarded.

Though no United States firm was named in the advertisements, it was learned that United States bids were considered "much too high." The government is expected to negotiate an oil barter arrangement to pay for most of the machinery.

Pipsa was said to be planning to use an African fiber grass, known as vesparta, and alfalfa, which is used widely in Italy, for perhaps 50 per cent of the new plant's production. The fiber could be grown in large areas of Mexico.

Doris Stevens Avoids Luncheon Given Dr. Aranha

To avoid the appearance of gathering support to keep her position, Miss Doris Stevens whose 10-year tenure as chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women of the Pan American Union has recently been threatened, yesterday missed a luncheon with the Women's Press Club.

She declined to attend, it was pointed out, because the Brazilian Foreign Minister, Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, an old friend of Miss Stevens, was the guest speaker.

Miss Stevens' status with the commission was beclouded when President Roosevelt named Miss Mary Winslow as the commission's United States member.

Shanghai Faces Reprisals By Japan After 53d Slaying

Tokyo Angered by New Assassinations, Threaten Action in Foreign Sections; Britain Protests Bombing of Hongkong

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Feb. 21.—Two political assassinations in or near Shanghai's International Settlement and a Chinese gunman's attack on four Japanese there brought threats today of Japanese action against the Settlement and the French concession.

Marquis Li Kuo-Chieh, Chinese minister to Belgium in 1910-1912, was killed today in the American defense sector of the International Settlement. Techeng Loh (Chen Lu), foreign minister of the Japanese-sponsored Nanking reform government, was slain yesterday by 20 Chinese, who broke into his home adjoining the Settlement. A Chinese gunman fired into a taxicab Sunday and wounded three of the four Japanese occupants.

A policeman of the local Japanese-dominated Chinese administration and a sergeant of the Chinese Settlement police were shot down today by gunmen whom police said had entered the settlement from Japanese territory.

Foreign observors here doubted that the Japanese would take such extreme action as to occupy the settlement, and believed that even if they should decide to occupy it, armed resistance would be unlikely.

Li's assassination was the fifty-third political killing since Japanese occupied the Shanghai area in November, 1937.

Tokyo, Feb. 21 (AP).—Japanese relations with third powers in China were believed tonight to be nearing a showdown as the result of a tense situation in Shanghai and the bombing of a railroad station in British Hongkong by Japanese airplanes.

In a two-hour emergency session the cabinet considered drastic action to check anti-Japanese terrorism in Shanghai.

London, Feb. 21 (AP).—Great Britain today sent a "vigorous protest" to Japan over the bombing of Hongkong territory by Japanese planes.

Dispatches from Hongkong said a railroad station inside the crown colony border was bombed by Japanese planes. A British Indian policeman was killed and about a dozen other persons were injured.

Defense

wedge that may involve us in trouble with the Orient."

A vote on the Guam authorization and the balance of the new naval base program was tentatively set for Thursday.

Vote on Army Bill Today

Other developments as both houses pressed forward with the President's defense program were:

The Senate Military Affairs Committee decided to vote today on the $367,000,000 Army expansion bill which already has passed the House, after hearing high Army officers indorse the program and stress need for appropriations in another bill to equip the Nation's "initial protective force."

Senator Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado, said he would offer an amendment to the Army bill exempting Army "educational orders" of war equipment from provisions of the Walsh-Healey act, banning Government purchases from firms not meeting set labor standards.

The House Military Affairs Committee favorably reported a bill authorizing the President to lend Government experts to Latin-American countries after Assistant Secretary of State George T. Messersmith testified European nations are "using every effort to press the services of their experts" on South American nations.

In a Senate speech, Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, declared America need have no fear of involvement in war and charged that "Great Britain, of all the great aggressor nations of the earth, certainly has been the great aggressor."

Gen. Wesson Heard

Maj. Gen. Charles M. Wesson, Army chief of ordnance, told the Senate Military Affairs Committee that the $110,000,000 recommended by the President to equip with modern arms America's initial force of 400,000 Regular Army, National Guard and Reserve officers and enlisted men might fall short of needs.

The $110,000,000 item is not before the Senate committee and will be handled by the House Appropriations Committee as a deficiency outlay. Chairman Sheppard said new authorization for the sum is not needed. Wesson testified the needed "critical equipment" can not be produced in less than two years, and intimated day and night factory shifts might be necessary.

As six hours of House debate opened on the new naval base program, Representative Vinson declared the Navy Department has no present intention of fortifying Guam—center of the only real controversy in the bill.

Guam Plan Defended

Vinson said he justified the $5,000,000 improvement in the far Pacific island because it would provide:

A link in any overseas movement of naval patrol planes to the Philippines.

A stepping stone in the commercial air route across the Pacific.

A possible air and submarine base from which to protect vital overseas commerce from the Dutch East Indies.

A possible naval station to support the Asiatic fleet when the United States withdraws from the Philippines in 1946.

"Our fleet," said Vinson, "must not be hampered in its movements when it is called upon to defend America, and any implication that we should not go beyond the 180th meridian, even when our own territory lies beyond, is wrong. The people of this country will not agree to any such restriction."

"A Chip on Our Shoulder"

Leading the critical assault on the Guam improvements, Fish, ranking minority member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, said the appropriation "puts a chip on our shoulder" and "points an arrow at the heart of Japan, 1,300 miles away."

"If we are looking for trouble," said Fish, "this will give it to us. We will create enough hatred and suspicion in Japan to make war inevitable. What if Japan builds a base 1,300 miles from Panama?"

Representative Magnuson (Democrat), of Washington, interrupted to say that "Japan already has fortified its naval bases closer to Alaska than Guam is to Japan."

"A Lot of Bushwa"

Replying to Fish, another Republican, Representative Crawford, of Michigan, called suggestions that Japan would retaliate against development of Guam "a lot of bushwa." Crawford said the United States invites more danger in withdrawing from the Philippines than in fortifying Guam.

"Japan is conquering the Philippines now much more rapidly than we are moving out," Crawford charged. "If we are to agree to that, then let's get out of the entire Western Pacific."

Fish was joined in the attack by Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois, who said the Guam harbor development "will add to the tenseness of the delicate international situation" and will be interpreted as launching this country on "a policy of foreign intervention."

Representative Gifford (Republican), of Massachusetts, called Guam "the home of typhoons and as many as ten earthquakes a month," and said it was not "an enticing place to spend $5,000,000 on improvements."

Representative Cox, of Georgia, ranking Democratic member of the House Rules Committee, and Representative Drewry, of Virginia, ranking majority member of the Naval Affairs Committee, backed up Vinson's recommendations on Guam.

Drewry urged abandonment of "partisanship" on the defense issue and said the pending bill provided nothing more than developing air bases "on our own land and with our own money."

Cox argued that if the Asiatic fleet is to be continued, the Guam harbor must be improved.

Bendix Reveals Non-Icing Air Carburetor

Maher Asserts Device Will Be Available For Production Soon

Conquest of another flying peril, carburetor icing, was announced yesterday by Vincent Bendix, aviation equipment maker.

Here for the National Air Forum, the president of the Bendix Aviation Corporation said that his company had perfected a carburetor which would not "ice up" at low temperatures. Refusing to reveal details of the device, Bendix said it would be available for production shortly.

Col. Kern Dodge, president of the Air Defense League, also attending the forum, urged that America's air force be built around the heavy bombing plane, "as the Navy is built around the battleship." He declared that the 150 large bombers to be provided for the enlarged Air Corps were insufficient and advocated at least 600 such planes for the Army.

"The Air Defense League favors the increase in planes proposed by the President, but feels that more efficiency is needed in national defense," Dodge said. "We'll never get anywhere in aviation until we separate our air force from the Army and Navy. Air power must take its place as an arm of defense and not as an auxiliary to troops and battleships. We advocate a Department of National Defense with four divisions—Army, Navy, Air Force and Industrial Mobilization."

Formerly Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics, David S. Ingalls, said the United States was reaching a position in aviation development similar to that of 1925, when an exhaustive survey of the Nation's air status was made by the Morrow Board. He urged that the Government initiate a similar study by a board of prominent citizens at this time, lest the air expansion program become unbalanced.

Ingalls also urged that increased importance of aviation be recognized by re-establishment of the offices of assistant secretary for air in the War and Navy Departments, or creation of similar office.

British Inspection Barred

New York, Feb. 21 (U.P.).—Representatives of British interests today were denied permission to inspect plans of a "range keeper," a device used in controlling naval gunfire, on the ground that disclosure of the plans would be "detrimental to the national defense."

Federal Judge Clarence G. Galton denied the motion, made by counsel for Harold Isherwood, former commander in the British Royal navy reserve, and the estate of Arthur Hungerford Pollen, both of London, who are plaintiffs in a suit against the Ford Instrument Co., Inc., of New York.

The instrument company has manufactured the range keeper since the World War and sold it exclusively to the United States Navy. The plaintiffs contend they invented the device in 1911 and that their patent has been infringed.

Judge Galston said Rear Admiral Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, had opposed such a disclosure as a violation of the espionage act.

every city will need two airports, LaGuardia urged that the Federal Government and cities co-operate in airport construction. Cities should furnish the land and hangars and the Government build and maintain runways, he urged.

Thomas H. Black, editorial director of Colliers magazine, advocated that all first-class mail go by air in mapping out an expansion program for the industry.

Declaring that aircraft manufacturing "is in a war boom," William Barclay Harding, New York banker, warned against over expansion of facilities, lest the industry go through "another 1929." He told the Forum that the demand for American aircraft has increased to the point where half of the industry's production is for foreign sale, but that later foreign nations will build their own air industries.

Air Laws Assailed

Proper encouragement of the air transport industry, "now a political football bound by unsound laws," was asked by Harding. He contended that no special financial assistance should be given the industry by the Government nor fixed income be guaranteed lest "inevitable restrictions" follow.

Col. John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce, declared present aviation plants, without any material expansion of factory, are now capable of producing 5,500 military planes a year "after a short-time allowance for installing machinery and doubling the number of employes."

Safety Measures Taken

Chairman Edward J. Noble, of the C. A. A., said special safety measures were being taken in the program to train 20,000 civilian fliers as a defense backlog to avoid an increase in the accident rate and a reaction against aviation.

The new chief of the Weather Bureau, Commander Francis W. Reichelderfer, told the forum it may be necessary to establish floating weather stations in various parts of the Atlantic in connection with transatlantic air service.

In closing the forum, its chairman, Gill Robb Wilson, declared "isolation is becoming a myth" and said leaders of the industry must not only prepare the air power for the world, they must prepare the world for air power."

Alexander H. Bell Funeral Today; Veteran Lawyer

Services for Alexander H. Bell, 72, former president of the District Bar Association, who died yesterday, will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m. at St. Alban's Church, with the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating. Interment will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Bell is survived by his wife, Mrs. Susie Purcell Bell, a son, Alexander H. Bell, jr., and a grandson, Alexander H. Bell 3d.

Burial Today For Mrs. Newman

Funeral for Mrs. Margaret E. Newman, 83, will be held at 11:30 a. m. today at Hines' funeral chapel, Fourteenth and Harvard streets northwest. The Rev. M. P. German, pastor of Bethany Baptist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mrs. Newman leaves a daughter, Miss Cora Newman, of this city.

Pepper Partly Favors Townsend Plan

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, giving a qualified indorsement yesterday to the Townsend old-age pension plan, asserted "we can never solve the economic situation unless we develop machinery to stimulate and improve the purchasing power of the country."

Mrs. Marian Suter Rites Tomorrow

Services for Mrs. Marian C. Suter, former District public school teacher, who died Monday at her home, the Argonne Apartments, will be held at 1 p. m. tomorrow in the Hines funeral home, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Surviving are her husband, Robert Donn Suter; a stepson, George R. Suter, and five sisters, Miss Irene Carter, Mrs. David H. Rhodes, Mrs. James H. Wingfield and Mrs. Frank Sherman, all of this city, and Mrs. George Hillyer, Atlanta, Ga.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

MADRILLON GROWS UP: Madrillon will celebrate its nineteenth birthday with a large party on March 1. This affair will be one of the prize charivaris of the year, with a couple of thousand of Madrillon patrons all probably trying to extend good wishes to Peter Borras and greeter Martin at the same time. Madrillon is a remarkable institution. Not only have Mr. Borras, Mr. Martin and Chef Maggia been associated since the restaurant's opening, but there is hardly a waiter in the place who has been there less than 10 or 12 years. Fine Spanish and French cookery and the suave cordiality of Peter Borras have attracted a distinguished clientele, including many members of diplomatic and official groups.

Madrillon's birthday party will also mark the formal presentation of the new two-piano orchestra headed by Carr van Sickler and Don Shook.

GYPSY PRIMA DONNA: Marusia Georgiezskaya (and never mind asking us how to pronounce it), Russian gypsy contralto, will appear at Troika beginning next Monday evening. Troika's owner, Mrs. Helen Hamilton, is a-bubble with enthusiasm over Marusia, vows that she's nothing less than exquisite. Troika's fine basso, Vladimir Deloff, will return to New York within two weeks—leaving you only a few more chances to hear him sing "The Flea" in the Chaliapin manner.

Troika was very gay Sunday night with the entire company of the "What a Life" company from the National Theater, also Violinist Jascha Heifertz and his wife, Florence Vidor.

ISHAM (NOT F. D. R.) JONES: Wardman's Continental ballroom will ring with swing tomorrow evening when Isham Jones' 16-piece orchestra goes to town with the sort of rhythm favored on college campuses. This dance will be the first of a series featuring "big name" orchestras now being booked by Washington's Eddie Hodges. Vocals tomorrow eve will be provided by radio's Eddie Stone and the Three Ms.

DO YOU BELIEVE IN—anyway, it's "Miracle Week" at the Shoreham. Dancer Frances Woods is a deaf mute, was a six months' baby and born without ear drums. Mimic Walter Behr is a Hollander, but imitates such American celebrities as Shirley Temple and Cab Calloway without saying a word. He just turns on a record of the imitatee and goes into adept pantomime.

BAMBOO REPARTEE: Returning to town on Monday, Harry Hooley, advertising man for Bamboo Gardens, found the place a-buzz over that Sunday hold-up, was greeted thusly by Al Norton: "Here the place gets robbed on Sunday and you walk in wearing a new suit on Monday. Hm-m."

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: Roger Cote, drummer with the Biltmore Boys (Shar-Zad), when he was in grade school nourished a secret ambition to grow up and become a professional ice hockey player. He goes to Baltimore every Saturday for the hockey games.

Jim Fitzpatrick, saxophonist with Paul Kain's Metronome Room orchestra, used to be a star first baseman with the Cape Cod League. Spring still means just one thing to him—baseball.

Al Simmonds (Brown Derby) is getting his cabin cruiser overhauled and readied up for spring fishing trips. Says he, "I have a date with a big blue taylor and a couple of trout—I hope."

Johnny Shaw (Mayflower Lounge) says his favorite summer sport is "just sleepin' in the sun." Maybe he gets his exercise snoring.

Durward Bowersix, the one nongolfer of the Rainbow Room orchestra, shows signs of weakening in his determination to do nothing involving exertion. "It'll probably kill me," he says, "but I think I'll try a couple of rounds." Rounds of what?

Oscar, manager of the Hi Hat, likes to swim and dive. But he's such a busy fellow that he never has time to polish up his Australian crawl even in the Ambassador pool right in the same building as the Hi Hat.

KEEPING LENT: Today is the first day of Lent. You might start your Lenten regime easily with one of Hall's notable sea food dinners. Hall's chefs have been concocting lobster Newburg and suchlike tidbits for the last half century. What they don't know about the cuisine of the sea—just isn't known.

Another masterful sea food chef is Hans Lube of the Hour Glass. May we suggest a plate of the Lube barbecued clams or oysters.

ANNIVERSARY: Today marks a straight 18 months at the electric organ of the Hay-Adams House for Larry Hendrick. His original engagement was just for a couple of weeks, but time goes on and on, and so does Larry.

THRILLER-DILLERS: "I Have Eyes to See With" when Lotus' Buddy Shaner gives it a triple-twist of tenor melody.

"Between a Kiss and a Sigh," newest sweet-stuff song being done by Mayfair's Leo and Louanna, experts in the gentle art of melody tangling.

PIRATE QUEEN: Mrs. Don Dickerman, wife of the chief of the Pirates' Den, wears the most stunning antique jewelry in town. Prize items are two ancient poison rings, also a tiny poison flask swinging from a slender chain. But she does not keep any poison in them.

PRONUNCIATION: Folks pronounce Jack Kerr's (Cafe Caprice) name in the most varied ways considering that it's such a short name. You should not pronounce it "car" nor "care," but "cur." Says Jack, "My name makes me feel like a pup, but that's the way to pronounce it."

Maj. J. E. Bloom, Indian Fighter, Rites Tomorrow

Last rites, with military honors, will be held in Fort Myer Chapel and Arlington Cemetery at 10 a. m. tomorrow for Maj. J. E. Bloom, 88, U. S. A. retired, who died February 8 in Spokane.

Honorary pallbearers will be Brig. Gens. Frank Royer Keefer and Leigh H. Fairbank; Cols. P. M. Ashburn, G. Hoisington, Lloyd Fredendhall, and Capt. Arthur Garrecht.

Maj. Bloom was graduated from West Point in 1873; fought against the Sioux and Nez Perce Indians; served as chief quartermaster in Cuba during the war with Spain, and recruited 70,000 soldiers during the World War at his Jersey City station.

Samuel A. Copp, Navy Yard Worker, Funeral Today

Funeral for Samuel A. Copp, 54, Navy Yard employe, will be at 3 p. m. today at the S. H. Hines funeral home, Fourteenth and Harvard streets northwest. The Rev. Frank Steelman, pastor of Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church, will officiate.

Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery, with Masonic rites by New Jerusalem Lodge No. 9.

Mr. Copp died Monday at his home, 734 Otis place northwest. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mellie R. Copp, and a sister, Mrs. Edna C. Beek, of this city.

Army Differs With Roosevelt On Ohio Canal

Favors Project to Link Great Lakes And Ohio River

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt and the chief of Army engineers sent varying views to Congress yesterday on a proposal to dig a $200,000,000 Beaver-Mahoning canal through Ohio and Pennsylvania, connecting the Great Lakes and the Ohio River.

Maj. Gen. J. L. Schley reported to the House Rivers and Harbors Committee that "the savings in transportation charges and other benefits are sufficient to warrant adoption of the project at this time." His approval was conditioned on the co-operation of local interests.

Mr. Roosevelt, emphasizing that he was not expressing "any formal disapproval," said the Interstate Commerce Commission should make a survey of railroad rates in the area before any huge Federal outlay was made for the canal.

In addition, Mr. Roosevelt raised the question of "priority." He said an undertaking of that magnitude would "necessarily push to one side" other public works.

Meanwhile, the controversial Florida ship canal, another $200,000,000 project, was brought back to public attention when the Commerce Department withdrew objections to the undertaking.

The objections had been registered in a 1934 report. Acting on a Senate request that the report be brought up to date, the department said that potential traffic had increased 100 per cent since its previous study and that the project had been changed from a lock type to a sea level canal.

Reliefer Held on Charge Of Borrowing 3 Children

Philadelphia, Feb. 21 (AP).—A woman, accused of posing as a widow and "borrowing" a neighbor's three children to add to two of her own and impress investigators, was held for court today on a charge of "chiseling" $2,021 in State relief funds.

"I have no objections to any sober or orderly persons' gratifying their curiosity in viewing the buildings, gardens etc., about Mount Vernon."

Canal Parkway Dedication

Major commemorative services will be held at the tomb in Mount Vernon, at Washington Monument here and at the Masonic Shaft in Alexandria.

The National Park Service will dedicate the 22-mile Chesapeake & Ohio Canal Parkway with a dramatization of historic canal events in ceremonies beginning at 2:30 p. m. at Lock No. 1, Twenty-ninth and K streets northwest. George Washington was a prime mover in building the predecessor to the C. & O.

D. C. Dow, advisory board president of District Masonic Clubs, accompanied by delegates from 21 units, will place a wreath at the base of the monument at 9:30 a. m., following a similar rite by a representative of President Roosevelt. The group then will leave for the Masonic Memorial in Alexandria to participate in ceremonies honoring Washington, the first master of Alexandria Masonic Lodge No. 22, later joining in a pilgrimage to Mount Vernon.

D. A. R. Celebration

Representative Starnes, of Alabama, will speak at the Continental Hall exercises sponsored jointly by the D. A. R., Sons of the American Revolution, Sons of the Revolution, and Children of the American Revolution. The program, to begin at 10:15 a. m., will include selections by the United States Marine Band, and the Gordon Junior High School Glee Club.

Led by Commander in Chief Eugene Van Antwerp, of Detroit, and Auxiliary President Anna Mae Lochner, of St. Petersburg, Fla., delegations will assemble in Alexandria for the V. F. W. pilgrimage to Mount Vernon, where rites will be held at 11 a. m. Later, beginning at 2:30 p. m., the V. F. W. will sponsor an 11-band parade through Alexandria. A George Washington birthday ball will top the celebration at George Mason Hotel, with Russell Mitchell Post as host.

Legion to Participate

The District Department of the American Legion will mass colors at the Monument at 10:30 a. m. Participating will be the auxiliary, Forty and Eight, Eight and Forty, Sons of American Legion, and Auxiliary Juniors. George Washington Post No. 1 will pay tribute at Mount Vernon also at 10:30 a. m., forming a motor cavalcade at Connecticut avenue and H street northwest. Alexandria Post No. 24 will sponsor a ball in Gadsby's Tavern.

Addresses by Representatives Connery, of Massachusetts, and Hunter, of Ohio, will cap the services of Columbia Post, No. 17, Irish War Veterans of the United States, who will start their pilgrimage to the tomb from 1130 Eighteenth street northwest at 10:30 a. m., with a stop scheduled at Christ Church, Alexandria.

Representative Bolles, of Wisconsin, will speak at Association of Oldest Inhabitants exercises at 11:30 a. m. in Old Union Engine House, Nineteenth and H streets northwest. W. S. Torbert will deliver Washington's Farewell Address and John Clagett Proctor will read a poem. Frank K. Sanderson, and a quartet will sing.

Mount Vernon Chapter No. 22, Military Order of Purple Heart, will journey to Mount Vernon and later hold its fourth annual banquet at 8 p. m. in Kenesaw Hotel. Representative Starnes and Ann Singleton, writer, are the speakers. The order was founded by Gen. Washington in 1782 to foster "military merit."

Mrs. Ethel G. Thorpe, State councilor of Sons and Daughters of Liberty, is to lead a delegation from the District councils for wreath-laying exercises at the tomb at 3 p. m.

Bishop James E. Freeman will be celebrant at the eleventh annual Washington's Birthday corporate communion for men and boys in Washington Cathedral at 8 a. m. Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts, of the United States Supreme Court, will preside at a conference following the communion.

Other celebrations include:

Baltic American Society—Banquet and musicale will highlight the triple celebration of Washington's birthday, Lithuania and Estonia days in the Admiral Club at 7 p. m.

Communist Party—Commemoration meeting in National Press Club, 8 p. m., with Clarence Hathaway, editor of Daily Worker, discussing the "United States Foreign Policy and the Present War Crisis."

Federal Camp Council—Government employes sponsor camp outing at Catoctin recreational demonstration area, near Thurmont, Md.

Capital Hiking Club—Birthday pilgrimage from Great Falls to Difficult Run along route of the old Potomack Canal, planned by George Washington on the Virginia side of the river. Bus to starting point leaves 1416 F street northwest at 1:30 p. m.

The Central Issue

Widespread interest in the Griffenhagen report is an encouraging sign. It has become the subject of many civic gatherings and official conferences. Likewise individual citizens are manifesting a great deal of interest in this study of Washington's obsolete governmental machinery, as indicated by the heavy demand for copies of the report.

In many instances there is opposition to specific proposals of the experts. That is not unnatural. As Representative Kennedy has pointed out, no detailed reorganization plan of this sort can be expected to obtain the support of all groups for all of its features. The very fact that such complaints are being made is encouraging, for it suggests that the critics recognize the constructive nature of the report as a whole and expect Congress to give it favorable consideration. Previous attempts to modernize Washington's makeshift local government have failed more because of apathy than any aroused opposition.

As chairman of the House subcommittee which will conduct hearings on the Griffenhagen plan, Representative Kennedy has set an admirable example of open-mindedness in regard to the report. "My sole interest," he says, "is to give the District a modern, efficient and economical municipal machine, and I hope that special interest groups who oppose certain details of the Griffenhagen plan will not throw cold water on the entire new setup that has taken Griffenhagen and Associates seven months to develop." That attitude commands emulation by every local agency considering the report.

Mr. Kennedy is willing to leave the schools outside of the proposed municipal charter if it can be shown that the present educational system in the District is superior to and more efficient than the new plan. That view will doubtless be indorsed by a great majority of District residents. It will give school authorities a full opportunity to present their case, with assurance that the cards are not stacked against them.

Satisfactory provision for an up-to-date, efficient educational system, as free as possible from the influence of politics, must be made. It would be most unfortunate, however, if the issue of an autonomous school board should lead to an open clash of local groups over the Griffenhagen plan. Those who wish to preserve the Board of Education have a public responsibility to avoid any move that would jeopardize the proposed overhauling for other agencies rendering municipal service here.

It is not simply a question of dropping that section of the plan calling for a department of education. Adoption of the proposed District charter would necessarily mean new relationships for the school system. For the present method of appropriating funds for all local agencies would be abolished, and control over the District purse would be lodged in a local governing body. To avoid a negative attitude, school authorities should take for granted the creation of a genuine local government and point out what, in their opinion, the relations of the Board of Education to this regime should be.

Similar tactics might well be followed by other groups with criticism to offer. Every local citizen has a vital interest in the establishment of a real community government for Washington. Let that objective be taken as an accepted basis on which all proposed changes in the plan will be built. Criticism will then be in the nature of constructive advice instead of threats of sabotage.

Co-operation Needed

District officials have voiced their satisfaction with the new pedestrian control ordinance as it has operated so far. They report that, on the whole, the city has taken kindly to it, with most pedestrians manifesting a good-natured willingness to co-operate with the police in making the measure effective.

The real test of pedestrian regulation, however, will come after March 10, when the present period of so-called "educational enforcement" comes to an end. Then violators of the ordinance will be subject to penalties, whereas now they merely court a police admonition.

If pedestrian control is to be truly effective, it cannot rely primarily on punitive threats, but must be the result of co-operative action by pedestrians and motorists alike. In other words, the new ordinance can work only if the people want it to work. But since the rules that have been laid down are definitely in the interests of pedestrians, are designed to save lives and are reasonable both in nature and in scope, they deserve the fullest co-operation of the public.

With experience these rules may be modified. But for the time being the system ought to be given a chance to show its merits. It is to the interest both of the community and the individuals within the community to co-operate in that endeavor.

What For Is Democracy?

Among the protestants against the rally of the German-American Bund in New York on Monday night was, according to reports, "one slightly inarticulate man in a checkered mackinaw" who kept shouting: "What for is democracy?"

The answer, had the individual in question been intelligent enough to understand it, was all around him. The very essence of democracy was exemplified by the official sanction for this pro-Nazi rally, by the effective police protection accorded it and by the relatively small disorder which this strongly provocative affair produced. Indeed, the entire demonstration might almost have been staged to illustrate the vitality of the aphorism attributed to Voltaire: "I wholly disapprove of what you say and will defend to the death your right to say it."

Democracy is not so much a system of government as a way of life. It is a Christian philosophy which maintains that the individual has great potential virtues within himself and that the function of government is not to repress but to further the development of these individual talents. An essential duty of any democratic government, therefore, is to defend minorities, this duty being all the more pronounced when the minority viewpoint is unpopular. It is in the defense of minorities, of course, that the democratic state contrasts most strongly with the totalitarian regimes. Whether these call themselves Nazi, Fascist, or Communist they all operate on the principle that minorities must be suppressed.

The whole character of the Bund demonstration was alien to the democratic system. It actively sought to foment racial and religious hatreds which, if carried far, would undoubtedly weaken the strength and unity of America. Precisely because of that fact Mayor LaGuardia showed real stature by authorizing the meeting and by insuring its adequate protection. The Mayor, whom none can accuse of pro-Nazi leanings, thus demonstrated his faith in the strength of the American way.

To permit an aggregation like the German-American Bund to heil its collective head off is automatically to discredit the moronic spectacle in the minds of thinking people. It is to expose the viciousness of the organization and thereby draw its teeth, much as the somewhat similar K. K. K. was exposed, and rendered ridiculous, by its nightshirt parade in Washington some 14 years ago. Demonstrations of this sort always arouse popular antagonism unless they are forcibly attacked, in which case they tend to enlist on their side the deep-rooted American passion for fair play.

Thus it happens that the one factor preventing the Nazi rally from being an utter flop was the abortive effort of such groups as the Socialist Workers Party to break up the meeting. Communists, using the word to designate a general revolutionary left-wing viewpoint, have no more understanding of democracy than have the Nazis. When either group denounces the other the perfect illustration of pot and kettle is provided. And with few exceptions the American people believe in letting both of these ugly and very similar fanaticisms expose their respective idiocies unhampered. There would, for instance, be a strong demand for protection of the Communists if Nazi groups should try to break up their rally scheduled at Madison Square Garden next Monday.

There are some who objected to the display of a picture of George Washington, and of the American flag, on the stage during the Bund demonstration. There will be others who will object when the Communists use similar patriotic trimmings next week. Nevertheless, it can be said, very appropriately on Washington's birthday, that there is something unintentionally fitting in such tributes from groups whose whole attitude would be detestable to the great leaders of American history.

The ideals of Washington were as far removed from those of the Nazis as were the ideals of Lincoln from those of the Communists. But Washington, as Lincoln after him, believed passionately in that fundamental tenet of Americanism which demands protection for the rights of even ignorant minorities. For Washington knew, and Lincoln knew, and every American reared in their tradition knows, that fools must be suffered in order that principles may be protected.

A lot of filthy gibberish was spouted at the Nazi rally called ostensibly in honor of Washington's birthday. And yet, paradoxically, this meeting did actually pay honor to the tolerance, the wisdom, the far-sighted patience of Washington. Without the principles which he embodied, by which America still lives, a pro-Hitler meeting in New York would be impossible. The irritation which it causes, compared with the value of the legacy of freedom, is a triviality.

The Silver Lining

Far-reaching consequences of the Warring scandal are now evident. Emmitt Warring, king pin in the numbers racket, is reported by his attorney to have withdrawn from that illegal business since his jury-tampering efforts were exposed. Sweeping reforms in the system of appointing deputy marshals are under way in the Department of Justice as a result of the disgraceful conditions revealed by the contempt proceedings before Judge Laws.

Perhaps even more important is the healthy indication that interference with the process of justice, even in minor degree, will be severely dealt with. Caught in the morass surrounding this case are not only the numbers racket chieftain and a venal deputy marshal who betrayed his trust, but also Thomas H. Quinlan, who was found guilty of contempt for investigating a juror for Emmitt Warring. The camp-followers of crime have been put on notice that this is dangerous business.

The case has been exceedingly well conducted. Judge Laws has shown himself alert to all the implications, without in any way prejudicing the rights of any of those cited for contempt. District Attorney Pine has been most diligent in following up every lead, and in laying his evidence before the court in fair but convincing fashion. Some decisions are yet to be made, particularly in the cases of Attorneys Whelan and O'Connell, and sentences for those found guilty are yet to be pronounced. But there can be little doubt that the punishment to be meted out will accord with the seriousness of the offenses.

While these developments are decidedly heartening, it would be easy to draw too much optimism from this successful brush with the forces of the underworld. We must remember that Emmitt Warring was not tripped up because of his activities as chief of an enormous numbers racket, but because he attempted to influence a jury trying him for income tax fraud. Will some one now step into his place and continue a business with such demonstrably vicious ramifications?

This question could be answered with a great deal more assurance if the District were making as earnest an effort to clean house as is the Department of Justice. Corruption of the deputy marshal who had charge of juries has been admitted. Bribery of police to permit continuation of the numbers racket remains only an allegation. But it is none the less serious for that. As the loose ends of this scandal are cleared up in court, the responsibility of the District to improve its part in law enforcement, to take full advantage of this victory over the numbers racket, is once more emphasized.

Same Old Rule

The speed with which the Senate turned down the nomination to a district judgeship of a candidate "personally offensive" to the two Virginia Senators was no greater than the haste in which it confirmed the nomination of Senator Barkley's campaign manager, Shackelford Miller, jr., as judge for the Western District of Kentucky.

In both cases the Senate simply "rubber stamped" the recommendations of its Judiciary Committee without discussing the merits of the appointment. In the former case, however, the rule of Senatorial courtesy worked against the President's appointee while in the latter case it worked to the nominee's advantage.

The Senate's callous disregard of the personal qualifications of Mr. Miller and lack of interest in his fitness for the office of Federal district judge so far have brought no word of rebuke or protest from the President. Yet if he is a consistent believer in the merit system of appointment he should feel as profoundly indignant on this occasion as he was when the rule of Senatorial courtesy led to the rejection of Judge Roberts.

Indeed, considering the fact that Mr. Miller was campaign manager for Senator Barkley when a primary contest of a particularly unsavory character was under way, in Kentucky, his record should have been subjected to searching scrutiny. The Sheppard Committee on Campaign Expenditures has found that systematic and widespread exploitation of Federal workers and WPA employes occurred in Kentucky on behalf of solicitors for the Barkley campaign fund.

While there was no definite evidence linking either the Senator or Mr. Miller with this nefarious system, the fact remains that contributions obtained from WPA workers, fearful of dismissal, helped the Senator in his fight against Gov. Chandler. And Mr. Miller, the Senator's chief lieutenant, is now reaping the rewards of that victory, as was pointed out in a letter of protest from A. F. of L. officials which the Senate has chosen to ignore.

If the Senate had applied the merit system of appointment to the case of Mr. Miller instead of adhering to the time-worn but not time-honored rule of Senatorial courtesy, it would almost certainly have demanded a little more intensive investigation of the campaign activities that preceded the Democratic primary election in Kentucky. If Mr. Miller had no knowledge of the WPA scandals, his singular blindness in itself casts doubt upon his qualifications for the important judicial post he now holds.

Senatorial Courtesy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt has repeatedly warned the Nation that he would ignore long-standing traditions wherever they stood athwart the path of his purpose. He flew to Chicago in 1932 to accept his first nomination, before the convention had adjourned, contrary to the custom of both political parties, which required the nominee to wait for several weeks before being informed of his selection by a committee on notification. The Constitution provides that nominations by the President shall be confirmed by the advice and consent of the Senate. But by these inferences of language this advice and consent must be secured precedent to confirmation, and not prior to nomination. For 150 years it has been the practice for the President to consult one or both Senators of the State from which the appointee hails or in which he is to function, in advance of submitting his name to the Senate.

Although there is no constitutional warrant for this senatorial courtesy, yet Senators have come to look upon it as their just prerogative which even the President dare not ignore. President James A. Garfield flouted this tradition and nominated the collector of the port of New York against the protest of both Senators from that State, who became so indignant at this breach of senatorial courtesy, that they resigned in protest, and appealed to the Legislature for vindication. Their failure to be re-chosen constitutes, perhaps, the greatest blow that senatorial courtesy has received before or since. Vice President Dawes, on assuming office, announced his purpose to liberalize the procedure of the Senate in defiance of long standing custom and tradition. But the intrepid general was compelled to desist from his worthy objective, a sadder and wiser man.

Long usage and acceptance become hardened into precedent and tradition which assume the strength and stubbornness of law. Senatorial courtesy and the ineligibility of the President for a third term belong to this category. There is no constitutional authority for either of these traditions. And yet they are accorded super-constitutional sanction as a matter of practical procedure. Many of President Roosevelt's friends and all of his enemies credit him with the determination of breaking the hold of the dead-hand of these traditions.

In the instant issue the champions are aptly chosen—the octogenarian Senator from Virginia who reveres the sacredness of tradition, and the author of the New Deal who believes that the wheel of progress must "spin forever down the ringing groove of chance."

Democracy In Mexico

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I find that The Post misquoted my remarks before the Modern Forum on Sunday, February 19. Your story has me saying that "protection of American and other foreign investments in Mexico hampers rather than aids the progress of democracy in that country."

In substance what I said was this: "It is misleading and dangerous to believe that the mere recapture of the Mexican market by American interests and for American investments solves the problem of democracy in Mexico. Over and above this there must be an effort to co-ordinate all forces working for democracy in both countries, especially labor. If this is not done, the mere process of recapturing markets and struggling to control investment fields may lead to the destruction of democratic forces."

Liquor And Poverty

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am very much interested in slum clearance and relief and the interest some are taking in the youth of our country, but would like to feel that it was being done in the desire to better mankind and not for political reasons.

If the right spirit were put into the work, I would say to look to the causes which produce these results. When we see so many places so very near our schools and high schools where whisky, beer, etc., is sold, I wonder what effect the New Deal philanthropists think this is having on the youth of our country.

When you visit the slums and see little children without bread and proper clothing you will sometimes find a drunken father. The saloons get the money today that should be spent for food and clothing for little children and their mothers.

I wonder how these New Dealers feel who worked so hard to repeal the eighteenth amendment when they read of the brutal crimes drunken fathers or sons commit, or people being killed by drunken drivers or the young girls drinking in bars and elsewhere. I wish they could look into the future and see what the next generation will be like.

We haven't been on relief during the depression but we did not spend our money either for cigarettes and cocktails, which I suppose sounds more dignified than "booze." L. M. KOODINCH.

Brickbats From The Right

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The announcement recently that Congress has appointed a committee to take the pulse of the public concerning their stewardship of Government for the past seven years made me smile.

They should have had their ears to the ground a long time ago and consulted Mr. Man-of-the-Street, which is generally an accurate way to gauge public opinion as a whole, and they would have found that the majority of us feel that the dominant party contains among their number far too few of men like Glass, Byrd, Tydings, George and Walsh, etc.

They are indicted at the bar of public opinion not only as a parasitical bunch of spendthrifts, but also (at the request of their national leader) for whitewashing men whom they themselves have condemned for the misuse of public money and even voted to confirm said men in higher positions in the Government after they, in some cases, have been discredited by the folks back home.

If the opinion of the Man-in-the-Street is consulted further, you will find wonderment expressed why there are no voices raised in Congress to demand of the Secretary of State that the Ambassadors recalled from Europe be sent back to their posts. Are these Ambassadors being paid for their long vacation at home? And by what? Or is it a deliberate attempt to provoke war with hitherto friendly powers? The people as a whole are heartily sick of this childish, I might almost say vicious, conduct of public affairs both international and domestic. W. E. L.

Slightly Satirical

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The time for sentimental words about Spain is past. Now we must follow up realistically on the net effects of our Spanish policy. It was a mistake for us not to have had at least one open car with the American flag and American representatives, in Franco's triumphal procession into Barcelona.

There is no reason for us to be shy. It is true that Italy and Germany have helped Franco more, but we—along with Great Britain and France—rendered indispensable service. Without our embargo (they use the quaint word "non-intervention" in Europe) the Spanish republic, a mild, liberal regime chosen by the people, would have been able to defend itself.

The British expect to nose out Italy and Germany in Franco's gratitude because they have the capital to lend for the development of Spain. We have lots of surplus capital too. And heaven knows Spain now will need lots of "development."

It is too bad we could not have had a cruiser, as the British did, to turn over a republican-held island to the insurgents. These little gestures are just as important in international affairs as the more solid contributions like choking off your ally's opponent. Of course the American people never voted Franco their ally, but when do the people deal with such mysteries as foreign policy?

Speedy recognition of Franco is our best and most consistent next step in foreign affairs. Perhaps it cannot be de jure recognition yet, because here we ought to wait for the British; Chamberlain is the guardian of an older diplomatic tradition, a more mellow culture. But it won't be long to wait. Meanwhile let us have de facto recognition.

Spanish example and influence are enormously important for all of Latin America. And if we really mean to continue cultivating Latin America, we ought to be in form as well as deed on the side of the regime that controls Spain. After the embargo, then, recognition.

Flags Made In Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an American citizen, and a 100 per cent one at that, I can't understand why another country, such as Japan, must make American flags—emblems of our glorious country. When, upon looking for small silk flags, we discover a little label—"Made in Japan." It seems to me that a country as fine as ours should certainly be able to make all its own flags, the most honored emblem among the nations of the earth.

I think it is time we all wake up to this kind of thing if we want to stand 100 per cent for our country.

Dr. Kindler's Articles

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I tell you what great pleasure I am having in reading the articles by Dr. Hans Kindler in your paper? I have read The Washington Post from time to time but now I am taking the Sunday paper regularly because of Dr. Kindler's column. A music page is sometimes inclined to have a certain "sameness" but that cannot be said of his articles, which are so very interesting, colored by personality as well as being instructive. May we—I include the many others who feel as I do—look forward to them for a long time to come.

Conventionopolis

AMONG THE MOST noteworthy of American cities is one that is at the same time everywhere—and nowhere. It is a city within cities, and can be found in all of them of any size at all. At the same time it has no separate and cognate identity.

While it is in different States, and from time to time its population fluctuates, there is nothing else in which it varies except its climate. Sometimes that is cold, and sometimes torrid. But that much is to be expected of all cities.

Even its inhabitants are alike, wherever the city is found. Its essential architecture is monotonously unvarying. Its municipal features, attractions and occupations follow the same routine from year's end to year's end. Yet hardly anyone there is very much at home. It is the very self-contained and very special city in which all American conventions are held.

The central point in this pervasive town, which in lieu of any official name we may as well call "Conventionopolis," is always a hotel, or a group of hotels. As adjuncts thereto there are one or more railway stations, and some convenient garages.

The hotel is always the same. It has rooms, a "coffee shop," a dining room, a ballroom, an exhibition hall, an assembly room (which is usually the ballroom in disguise), and a registration desk. Of course, there is a barroom. It goes by various fancy names, this barroom—but a barroom it is, and performs its function as such almost completely around the clock.

Besides the hotel there is at least one theater. And there are streets, with persons strolling on them; chiefly women.

These are the essential elements of the city I am describing. It rarely has any others, except perhaps a restaurant or two that may be without the limits of the hotel. If there aren't any of these it doesn't make any difference.

Sometimes the city is called New York. Sometimes it is Chicago—quite frequently, in fact, it is Chicago. At other times it is called Philadelphia, or Washington, or Boston, or Atlantic City. Now and then it may seem to be Los Angeles, or San Francisco, or Detroit, or New Orleans. But these names do not make any difference, either. Its inhabitants frequently forget the exact name the city chooses to call itself, and refer succinctly and properly merely to "The Hotel," or "The Convention." As long as they can find those two things they are in no danger of being lost, nor under any necessity of knowing any other name for the locality in which they happen to find themselves.

The inhabitants of the city are very heavily of one sex, usually male. But there is also a slight sprinkling of the opposite sex. There is little mingling between them, at any rate on a large or noticeable scale. Instead of that, each sex tends to keep to itself and to talk about the other.

Usually an atmosphere of great portentuousness overhangs Conventionopolis. Everybody who is there is there for a Purpose. Few of them can tell what the Purpose is, but they are there for it just the same.

If they have any need to get it expressed, or to find proof that this Purpose exists, they can always call an Inner Circle, and these will state it with a precision that will convince anyone. This Inner Circle is composed of the officers, and the executive committee. They are usually to be found in the Convention Hall, or in Parlor B, where there is an Executive Meeting.

Sometimes the Purpose has to do with the retail price of mayonnaise. Sometimes it deals with international peace, or education, or social work, or channels of distribution in the hardware trade. Or occasionally—with the names of the officers and executive committee dressed up grandiloquently in other terms—it deals with politics, or patriotism, or equal rights for blondes and brunettes. But its general pattern is always pretty much the same, so far as Conventionopolis is concerned. Whether it concerns better hats for men, or shorter skirts for women, it is always simply the Purpose of the convention.

Another characteristic of Conventionopolis is that, as it always has a Purpose, it is not necessary for everyone to worry about the Purpose. It is always there and doesn't need to interfere too much with the Incidental Value of the convention.

The Incidental Value is quite easy to attain and to appreciate. It arises from the fact that if you scratch the skin of almost any citizen of this amazing city, you are certain to find a specimen of what in other days used to be called the Tired Business Man.

He hasn't been called that very much lately, because there hasn't been enough business to make him tired. But essentially he is the same as he always was—that is, a person very much in need of relaxation, and much given to sociability. These traits come to their fullest expression in Conventionopolis, which fact comprises the Incidental Value of the convention.

Some say that the Incidental Value provides the basic reason why the convention is held. These schimatics hold to the doctrine that there is no Purpose nearly as important as Getting Away From Home and Meeting the Boys—or the Girls, as the case may be.

Right or wrong, they also are an integral part of Conventionopolis, and round out the final aspect of the spectral city I have proposed to describe. EUGENE PHARO.

Fair Enough

Hitler's Bolshevism

FALSE PRIDE is a terrible thing, and it seems a great pity that our Communists should picket and say unkind things about our anti-American or Nazi Bund when all that stands between them is a mere matter of precedence and vanity.

After all, the Communists and Nazis have everything in common, and Herr Hitler made a great gesture of appeasement last week when he ordered all the citizens of Germany into a state of slavery. The Communists cannot reasonably ask more of a man, but so stiff-necked are they that they refuse to give Hitler credit for his bolshevism merely because he insists on retaining the leadership of his own Bolshevik country. That is unreasonable. Nobody wants to put a German or an American Bolshevik in command of the Russians, and the Communists go too far when they insist that no bolshevism is genuine without their official indorsement and Russian management. Hitler's bolshevism is very high-grade bolshevism.

What more do the Communists want of Hitler, anyway? How can the man ever please them, short of abdication to a Russian or someone selected by the Russians?

Hitler More Subtle Than Bolsheviks

HE HAS abolished private business and capital and expropriated factories and other means of production according to the Russian requirement. True, he did it gradually, but that was where he was smarter than the Russian Bolsheviks. They tried to do it in great, brutal grabs and met resistance from the owners.

But Hitler came along and said, "Boys, let me protect you from these Bolsheviks," and when they trusted him he took them over by degrees. He succeeded by cunning and kidding, where the Russians had made an awful failure of direct action, but the point is that he succeeded. The Russian Bolsheviks aren't fair in refusing to acknowledge his achievements for bolshevism.

Herr Hitler was so clever that he kept expert, experienced management in charge of industries, whereas the Russians would have killed such talent. The brutality of that would mean nothing to either type of Bolshevik, but the waste of ability and efficiency would have been terriole under the Russians. It would have been a form of sabotage.

Russians Called Too Impatient

OUR OWN Bolsheviks who criticize the anti-American Bund so harshly have to admit when cornered that Hitler has abolished freedom of speech and the press as effectively as the Russians did and under worse difficulties, too, because the Germans were used to a far greater degree of freedom than the Russians. What did the press ever mean to the Russians? How many of them could read?

As far as religion is concerned, there, too, Hitler is coming along fast. He had an obstinate situation which wouldn't be conquered suddenly. The attempt of the Russian-style Bolsheviks to abolish religion was one of the reason why they failed so badly in Germany. Hitler, however, started with the Jews and has been progressing to the Catholics and other Christian churches by degrees, meanwhile establishing a pagan state religion to interest the young.

The Russian Bolsheviks are too impatient, but they must admit that Hitler has made great progress against religion, and they will just have to reckon with local temperamental peculiarities of peoples if they hope to conquer the world. The German paganism in no way interferes with their bolshevism under Hitler. It is just a little quirk of their national character.

Reds Thwart Happy Union

OUR BOLSHEVIKS, if they were honest and good sports, would admire the leaders of the anti-American Bund for their tactics in this country.

The Nazis kiss the flag, indorse the Constitution, embrace George Washington and vow that they will save us from bolshevism—which is nice of them, to be sure—by giving us naziism.

The Communists also kiss the flag, indorse the Constitution and embrace Lincoln, not caring much for Washington. And they are going to save us from naziism by giving us communism.

But inasmuch as both are bolshevism, the Americans are the only ones who stand to lose.

From the selfish standpoint the Americans may be thankful that the rivalry does keep the two types of Bolsheviks—Stalin's and Hitler's—apart. With each standing off the other our position in the middle is not as bad as it might be if they combined. But the squabble does offend truth, and a fair referee would have to blame the Communists for thwarting a happy union for reasons of jealousy only.

18 Identical Bids

By Ernest K. Lindley

Treasury's Patience Exhausted

IF A PRIVATE home-builder sought bids on his plumbing contract and, in reply, received seven bids identical to the penny, he would suspect, to say the least, that he was up against a plumbers' price-fixing agreement.

The chief purpose of the anti-trust proceedings against the 18 tire manufacturers, begun Monday by the Department of Justice, is to establish in the courts what a layman would regard as a natural and inevitable conclusion: that when various bidders submit identical bids it's a fair presumption that they have entered into an agreement to fix prices.

In August, 1936, the Procurement Division of the Treasury sent circular letters to all the automobile tire manufacturers in the country, and many tire dealers, inviting them to submit sealed bids on the tires required by the Federal Government during the six-month period beginning October 1. When the bids were opened they were found to set forth prices that were identical to the penny on each of 82 different sizes of tires.

Six months later the Procurement Division invited bids on the Government's tire requirements for the six-month period beginning April, 1937. This time it received bids that were higher than those of six months earlier, but again were identical to the penny on each of 82 different sizes of tires.

Treasury's Fuming Gets No Attention

SIX MONTHS LATER it was the same story all over. Again the prices were higher, and again they were identical, from all bidders, for 82 different sizes of tires.

At this point the Treasury Department's patience became exhausted. It sought the advice of the Attorney General. He gave the Treasury the hardly startling opinion that these identical bids were prima facie evidence of a combination in restraint of trade. The Treasury blustered and fumed a bit, threw out all the bids, and advertised for new ones. Lo and behold, when the new bids were opened they were still identical to a penny on 82 different sizes of tires—and also identical to the penny with the bids that had been rejected.

At this point the Treasury gave up trying to obtain bids which were not identical to the penny on 82 different sizes of tires. It declared that a state of "public exigency" existed, permitting itself to buy the Government's tires for the next six months in the open market or by a negotiated contract. Thereupon it negotiated a contract with Sears, Roebuck & Co., under which it bought all the Government's tires, except a few odd sizes, at prices substantially lower than the bids which it had rejected.

Treble Damages Asked in Suit

AFTER ADMINISTERING that salutary lesson for six months, the Treasury again asked the tire manufacturers and principal dealers to submit bids. This time it received bids which were not identical—and which were lower than the prices the Treasury had been paying to Sears, Roebuck, and than the tire companies had submitted in the earlier "competitions."

There had been no drop in retail prices to the general public in the meantime. So Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust work, has concluded that a drop in prices to the Federal Government was due to the elimination of a price-fixing agreement and the advent of real competitive bidding.

The Government calculates that it lost more than $350,000 during the 18-month period that it bought tires from identical bidders. It is suing for treble damages under the little-used Section 7 of the Sherman antitrust act.

There are two great novelties in this proceeding. This is the first time that the Federal Government has ever tried to take advantage of the right which the antitrust act accords to a private person, to recover treble damages for injuries suffered on account of an illegal combination in restraint of trade. A generation ago the City of Atlanta recovered damages from certain manufacturers of cast iron pipe. But in that case the manufacturers already had been found in another proceeding to be engaged in a combination in restraint of trade.

Tire Case Is One Of Many Others

THE OTHER NOVELTY in the proceeding against the tire manufacturers is nothing more nor less than the effort to obtain a court decision to the effect that the submission of identical bids creates a presumption of a combination to fix prices. Mr. Arnold thinks this is a reasonable interpretation to ask of the judge.

This is not an academic point. And the tire manufacturers who are being sued as guinea pigs were in no way exceptional. It would take several columns to list the articles on which the Federal Government receives identical bids with astonishing frequency. They range from steel products to shoe laces. In one case the Navy received 59 bids on a steel pipe order and every one of the 59 was for exactly $16,001.83.

The purpose of bidding is to assure that the Government buys most economically. Obviously, the whole purpose is frustrated when the bidders get together on their prices. There may be instances in which identical bids do not result from what amounts to a price-fixing agreement. But the presumption certainly is the other way in the layman's mind. Certainly, if the courts reach a sensible conclusion, there will be many fewer identical bids submitted in the future. If the courts balk it will be necessary for the Government to seek help from Congress.

The most surprising aspect of the proceeding begun by Mr. Arnold is that it is novel, that nobody had the ingenuity and the gumption to try it before now.

Back Home Stuff

Federal Judge Edwin S. Thomas, called back from an ocean cruise, used to be the boy wonder in Democratic politics back home. He lived in West Haven, got his start as a judge in the West Haven town court, had offices in the old Washington Building over the Hof Brau, was secretary to Gov. Simeon E. Baldwin, of Connecticut, and was such a handsome, athletic type we'd never recognize him from those new pictures.

If those houses made of glue are are ever put on the market a lot of people will get stuck.

Utopia

Oh how sweetly it'l' calm us
And how smiles will wreathe our pans,
When the Promisers don't promise,
And the Planners make no plans;
Won't we all be joyous splurgers
On this troubled continent,
When the country's purged of Purgers
And the Spenders all are spent?

Unhappy Ambassador

By Edward T. Folliard

Kennedy May Quit

He still flashes his Irish smile when the news photographers are around, but his friends here say that Joseph P. Kennedy, United States Ambassador to the Court of St. James's, is an unhappy man. They say, further, that they would not be surprised if he resigned his fat post in London.

Only one thing is likely to keep Kennedy in London more than a few months, these friends add, and that is a worsening of the crisis abroad.

Kennedy has come home twice since he was appointed to the Court of St. James's, and on each occasion he has found that men very close to President Roosevelt were sniping at him, "building a fire" under him, as he would say.

A friendly, forthright fellow, Kennedy was at first puzzled, then hurt, and finally angry. When he came home the first time, last June, President Roosevelt was at Hyde Park. Two newspapers had just published news stories from there saying that the Chief Executive was furious with Kennedy because of what he regarded as the latter's efforts to build himself up as a 1940 Presidential possibility.

Kennedy, whose friendship with Roosevelt goes back to the World War days, checked on the stories, apparently satisfied himself that they were inspired by somebody close to F. D., and then called at the White House for a showdown. He talked to one of the President's aides, and the language he used smacked more of the Boston wharves than of his alma mater, Harvard.

Irishman Became British Favorite

When Kennedy was appointed as Ambassador, the one thing that was noted above all else was that he was an Irishman, a man whose forebears regarded England as their eternal enemy. The English were intrigued too. Soon reports were coming back from London that red-headed Joseph Patrick was the most popular American Ambassador in years. They liked him because he fitted their own conception of a Yank. He was rich, yet democratic. He had a beautiful, home-loving wife and nine children. And right off the bat, at the Stoke Poges golf course, he made a hole in one.

To his astonishment, Kennedy was soon reading in American newspapers that Washington was worried about him because he had become friendly, too "pro-British."

"That really got Joe," one of his Washington intimates said yesterday. "Here he was doing what he thought was a good job, and he finds out that the left-wingers in the New Deal are planting stuff on him like that. Of course, the idea is ridiculous. Jusserand was the French Ambassador here for 25 years or so. He was extremely popular, a close friend of several Presidents. But did that make him less valuable to France?"

The biggest uproar over Kennedy came when, after Munich, he said in a Trafalgar Day speech that democracies "should bury the hatchet with the totalitarian states." His idea he subsequently explained was that if anything could be done to avoid war, it should be tried. He was in London throughout that war scare and he knew how the English felt. Over here, of course, there were many who felt that the English and French should have gone to war.

"As a matter of fact," Kennedy said on his last visit here, "I sent that speech in advance to Washington."

He Turned Down Cabinet Post

The State Department, however, apparently was loath to admit this, once the bad reaction set in.

Kennedy was ready to return to private life when President Roosevelt named him Ambassador. He had taken over the chairmanship of the new Maritime Commission with the understanding that he would remain only a year. In this job of building up the merchant marine, he won widespread, extravagant praise.

Anxious to use the one New Dealer who unquestionably had the confidence of American business, President Roosevelt offered Kennedy the post of Secretary of Commerce. The then Secretary, Daniel C. Roper, was to have been appointed Ambassador to Rome. Kennedy turned down the offer.

There was only one Cabinet job Kennedy wanted, and that was Secretary of the Treasury. He never made any bones about that. Last winter a story was circulated that he was about to get it. Secretary Morgenthau called Kennedy on the telephone and asked him about the story.

"I'll be frank," Kennedy told him. "I'd like to have your job. But I know that I can't have it, so why should I build a bonfire under you?"

Kennedy's chief critic here, according to his friends, is a prominent New Dealer, a member of the so-called "brain trust." This young man, so the story goes, had been grooming Robert H. Jackson, Solicitor General, for Governor of New York so as to have him ready as a Presidential candidate in 1940 should F. D. decide against a third term. An ambitious banquet was arranged for Jackson in New York, and the aforementioned brain truster asked Kennedy to head the committee in charge.

Kennedy, who was to sail for London a few days before the banquet, refused to take a hand. The banquet was a flop, and the brain truster never forgave Kennedy. This brain truster, by the way, is a great fellow for telling newspapermen, particularly columnists, what is going on in the New Deal,

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

To The Intolerant!

I WISH to address myself this morning to the intolerant. I wish to address myself to those Americans who are determined, if it costs them their lives, their jobs and their existences, to maintain on this soil the basic principle of this republic, that every citizen is equal before the law and must be judged by the law and society according to his personal conduct and behavior.

I want to speak to those among the many who give lip service to this principle, who really believe it, passionately, and with intolerance toward any counterbelief.

For this self-governing and democratic republic has need of men and women who will serve its principles with the uncompromising spirit of some of its enemies.

An alliance has been formed in this country between the followers of Father Coughlin and the followers of Fritz Kuhn to abolish the American democracy as we have known it since the days of Lincoln. The openness of the alliance became apparent in connection with the meeting in Madison Square Garden, called by the German-American Bund under the slogan of "Free America!"

They Boycott All Who Oppose Them

ON THE DAY before there was a Coughlin meeting in a New York armory at which bund literature and tickets to the Madison Square Garden meeting were distributed. There were numerous references to Father Coughlin's leadership by the German speakers. The two movements join together in organizing boycotts against all who oppose them. Both movements are led by extremely able and ambitious men. Together they appeal to many thousands. They are plentifully supplied with money and literature. They enjoy the prerogatives of free speech, and with the instruments of democracy they intend to set up in this country a Fascist regime.

They do not, of course, call it Fascist. Sinclair Lewis, when he wrote "It Can't Happen Here," foresaw with prophetic vision that when fascism came to America it would present itself as "true Americanism." In 1935, in a book believed by most to be fantastic fiction, he described almost exactly the meeting that was held in Madison Square Garden on Monday night. He described the storm troopers who would manhandle any opposition. He called them "corpos." They call themselves the "O. D.'s"—order division.

Well, fellow Americans, the boys are here. They are organized to deal with "unruly elements." Those unruly elements are you and me.

Democratic Rules 'Must Be Changed'

THEIR SLOGAN is—I quote from one of the speeches in the Garden—"America is not a democracy. America is a republic. We must change democratic rules to republican principles." In other words, we shall continue to have a President. So does Nazi Germany.

The Rev. Von Bosse, a Lutheran clergyman from Philadelphia, admitted that the movement was Fascist. "There is no line to be drawn between democracy and fascism. It is between communism and fascism. There is no in-between."

This means that if you are not for their program and oppose it, you will be denounced by them as a "red propagandist" and an agent of Moscow, probably paid. This, again, is the stereotyped international Fascist propaganda technique. It seeks to put every believer in representative government and the Bill of Rights on the defensive.

The new movement frankly dates back to the victory of Hitlerism in Germany in 1933. It accepts the authoritarian leadership principle. "Now, all pure Germans (in the United States) believe completely in a leadership in the firm hands of our leader, Fritz Kuhn."

30 Million People To Be Disfranchised

AMERICAN IDEALS are paraphrased into "white Gentile ideals." I learned from a speaker at Madison Square Garden that there were 100,000,000 "white" American citizens. Thirty million people were, by implication, coolly disfranchised.

The exact attitude of Hitler toward the churches is adopted. "We believe that the right to worship is every man's private affair, but we are opposed to all abuse of the pulpit by the so-called sloppy liberals." So we are to have free worship with Fascist censorship.

A seven-point program is adopted. Leaving out of account its ambiguous lip service to "Americanism," the program advocates the introduction into the United States of a replica of Hitler racial laws; it seeks to prevent any possible collaboration between this country and Great Britain and France, on the ground that all who advocate it are "war mongers."

"It declares it to be its purpose to establish in America a new "Aryan culture and code of ethics." (The code of ethics of rule by force and concentration camps, I must presume.)

It advocates the adoption of the swastika as an American symbol.

It demands the right to cherish the German language in this English-speaking country, and introduces the Fascist salute—I am quoting from their published program—as the "universal salute of the Gentile people the world over."

Although we are to adopt the swastika, the salute, abolish democracy and adopt the leadership principle, we are to avoid "entangling alliances." We are, I gather, not to have alliances but a union with the axis powers!

Boos for President, Cheers for Hitler

THE SPEAKERS advocated an organized boycott of "Aryan" citizens against all other American citizens not of "Aryan" race. All persons of Jewish blood must be ridden out of the cultural and economic life of America by legislation, according to Herr Kunze, the "national public relations director"—American for "propaganda director," our own Dr. Goebbels. I learned at Madison Square Garden, what I had already heard in Berlin, that all of our press, our finance, our government and our cultural life are in the hands of Jews and that the Jews are Communists.

I heard the President of the United States contemptuously referred to as Franklin D. Rosenfeld, with appreciative laughter and applause from the audience. I heard boos for the President of the United States, and cheers for Hitler.

This meeting was "protected" by the City of New York under a liberal progressive mayor, whose name was booed by the organized and disciplined audience.

Two people in the audience of 19,000 claimed their own constitutional right to protest. One was a young Jew, who leaped to the platform and was immediately struck to the floor by uniformed storm troopers. He was badly manhandled. The German press says that "it was shocking that a Jew should have been allowed to get into the meeting." In other words, Mayor LaGuardia is reprimanded for not seeing to it that only people favorable to Hitler's program are allowed to attend a public meeting in New York.

THE NAZI PRESS is ballyhooing as an "attempted assassination" an extremely courageous attempt of a single Jewish citizen to protest against the grossest and most libelous slanders against his whole people.

The other person who protested was myself. I dared to laugh instead of to applaud. Therewith I learned that the right of free assembly in the United States means that the public must agree with the speakers; otherwise he will be ejected by storm troopers assisted by the New York police of our liberal mayor.

There was plenty of comic relief in the meeting, if you can find this movement a laughing matter. Herr Kunze appealed to the American Bill of Rights, on the grounds "we are German-Americans, and we have the same rights as other citizens of this country to take part in the cultural and economic development of the country." That right has never been challenged. It is Herren Kuhn and Kunze who are challenging the rights of 30,000,000 non-Aryan American citizens to take part in the cultural and economic development of this country.

There was a certain comedy in hearing "Jewish non-American" accents denounced—by the followers of Father Coughlin and at a meeting where most of the speakers spoke with heavy German accents, and which was ended by singing a German song! If we are to have an accent war in America, heaven help us!

The final cry was:

"Free America!"

Free America from what?

'Trade Winds' Forms Unique Screen Pattern

Fredric March and Joan Bennett Costarred; Midnight Shows Enrich Paralysis Fund; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

A great many people unfamiliar with the piece-meal manner in which motion pictures may be well made have indulged in a vast amount of speculation and a considerable degree of skepticism as to precisely what will evolve in the matter of the picture for which Jascha Heifetz already, as violining star, has made the sound track, but for which no story has as yet been written. It probably will come out all right, the peculiar facility of the cinema in such things being what it is.

BELL

But that is aside from the point that equal curiosity might have been felt concerning Walter Wanger's production of "Trade Winds," released through United Artists and previewed yesterday by the drama desks. "Trade Winds" is a picture of strange origin.

It had its genesis in a leisurely private cruise which Tay Garnett, noted director, took into little known portions of the Pacific and others of the world's outposts, accessible by water. Mr. Garnett took his camera along and ground out many thousand feet of film recordings of what he encountered. Back in Hollywood he conceived the idea that in these footages was the basis of an interesting and unusual film play. So he set about contriving it.

An Ocean Cruise Is Overlaid With Murder-Mystery

Against the background of his world wanderings he projected a murder-mystery story, a little on the order of the "cops-and-robbers" business, with Fredric March and Joan Bennett in the stellar roles. By what are known as "process shots," montage and the like he managed to weld together the fictional narrative and the placid—and sometimes tumultuous—beauties of his travel tour.

The result is a picture that possesses qualities that few others have been able to boast.

Among these elements of novelty—the underlying nature of the "plot" being such as it is—is a whimsical and thoroughly diverting vein of humor. This has been written into the lines of the characters, of course, and not derived from Mr. Garnett's travelogue. Little need be said about Fredric March and Joan Bennett on the side of their proficiency. Ann Sothern, Ralph Bellamy, recently here for the President's Birthday Celebrations, and others in the cast are something else again. They have been given some splendid moments, in a bright and breezy sort of way, by Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell, who fashioned the story to dovetail with Mr. Garnett's peregrinations. The same authors did very well with "Sweethearts," too.

The Returns Begin to Come In

Speaking of the President's Birthday Celebrations, as we were a few lines back—but only incidentally—monetary returns from the various activities are beginning to pile in at the office of the Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Board of District Commissioners and general co-chairman, with George Allen, former Commissioner, of the general committee in charge of the celebrations.

Yesterday, for example, Carter Barron, eastern division manager for Loew's, Inc., turned over a check for $3,354.27 as the proceeds of the midnight show given in the Capitol Theater the night of Monday, January 30, and Harry E. Lohmeyer, acting on behalf of Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers interests in the Washington territory, presented a check for $1,396.99, representing the net profits of the midnight show at the Earle Theater, a house of considerably less seating capacity than the Capitol.

From these two sources alone, the addition to the fund for the combat of infantile paralysis, both nationally and locally, aggregates $4,751.26, which is quite an amount.

It will be of interest to his many friends in the National Capital that Harry Hunter, former manager of the Paramount Film Exchange in this city, will be returning shortly to his old bailiwick to make a visit. Mr. Hunter, who was transferred from Washington to the general managership of Paramount interests in Australia, plans to sail from Sydney on March 3, with this city as his ultimate destination.

"Gunga Din" Fulfills All Advance Prophesies

There was no doubt of it in our mind when we first viewed the picture. That is, that it would "stand up" on any man's screen for a protracted run that would bring joy and exhilaration to any lover of action on the screen. It possesses practically no subtlety, little romance and few of the niceties of refined and purling drama—but it does possess action.

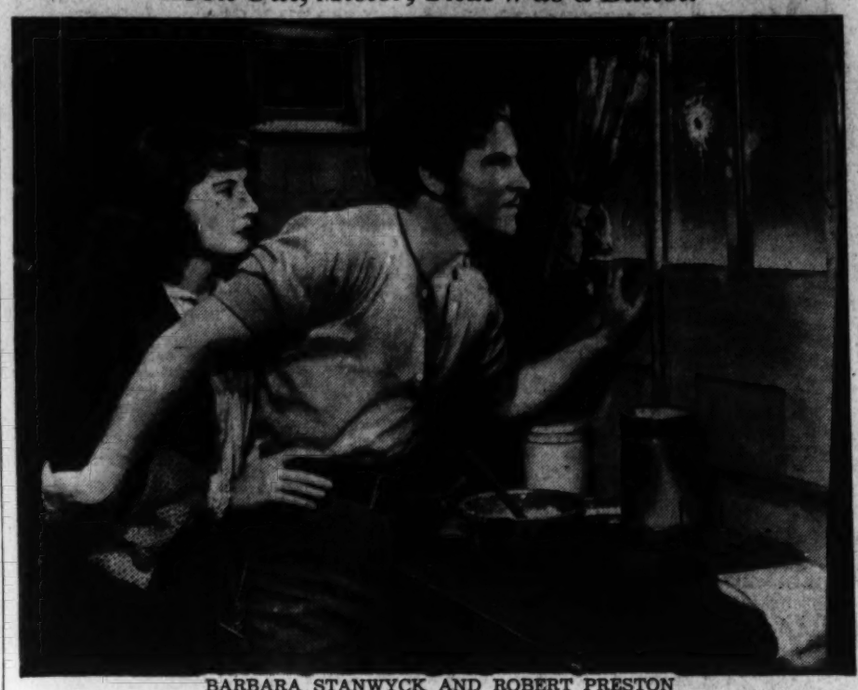
All of which is to say that "Gunga Din," the free adaptation to the cinema of Rudyard Kiplin's poem of the water boy, fashioned by Charles MacArthur and Ben Hecht, will continue for a fourth week at RKO-Keith's Theater. With Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., in the three pivotal roles of the British sergeants, warring in India in the name of their Queen, "Gunga Din" is something to be seen as a model exhibit of how to throw punches, if for no other reason. But there are several other reasons.

It seems that Katharine Hepburn is sharing Tallulah Bankhead's good fortune in the finding of a good new play. Ludwig Vroom, representing Miss Hepburn and the Theater Guild, drops by to say that Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story" is off to a fine start, with particularly handsome attention being paid by the out-of-town critics to the excellence of Miss Hepburn's performance. A little longer conversation with Mr. Vroom will bring out more of this in a day or two.

Putting-the-Overcoat-in-Hock Note

I still think it must be spring.

Look Out, Mister, That Was a Bullet!



BARBARA STANWYCK AND ROBERT PRESTON

as they appear in a scene from Cecil B. DeMille's new "epic" production of "Union Pacific," a far-flung drama of the railroad builders and the conquest of a continent. Mr. Preston is a young recruit from the Pasadena Community Playhouse of whom great things are expected on the screen. He is featured with Miss Stanwyck and Joel McCrea

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Feb. 21.

THE AMERICAN Library Association, grateful to the President for reducing the postage rates on books from 10 cents to 3 cents, mailed a scroll of thanks to him. By the time the scroll was ready and mailed, the postage required was more than the cost of mailing a book . . . Vincent Astor entered New York Hospital yesterday . . . Jim Coffroth, the promoter, and Amon Carter, the Fort Worth publisher, both lost chunks shooting craps in a Manhattan night club, Coffroth dropped $42,000 and Carter $14,000 . . . Max Schmeling, who publicly denied that his wife will be banished, confided to friends this week that Mrs. Schmeling will arrive in America for the premiere of the New York World's Fair—and that she will remain here.

WHEN JACK KIRKLAND, the playwright, threw a punch at Dick Watts, the drama reviewer, Ralph Hewitt, Columbia's all-America football player, was one of those who slugged Kirkland . . . Saturday night Hewitt went to see Kirkland's new play, "I Must Love Someone," and shook hands with his erstwhile adversary . . . "What I minded," Hewitt confessed, "was the newspaper report which said that I had swung at you and missed. I wish they had reported the truth" . . . Kirkland rubbed his jaw, in reminiscence. "And I," he countered, "I, too, minded the fact that it wasn't true."

TOM MOONEY has not, as yet, denied that he will appear in a movie based upon his career . . . Jimmy Walker was the man instrumental in bringing to Hollywood's attention the possibilities of such a film story. When Walker, then Mayor of New York, went to California to plead for Mooney, Jimmy approached the head of a major film company and suggested the story . . . "Okay, oaky on this Mooney story," replied the producer, "but tell me—whoinhell is Tom Mooney?"

BEN HOWARD, who lost his leg in the Bendix Air Races, has left United Air Lines to become the test pilot for Douglas. He will replace Johnny Cable, who was killed in the plane crash where a French observer was aboard—the crash which started the current Senatorial inquiry . . . The companies which insured Douglas' DC-4 ships had a clause providing that Cable was to be in charge—otherwise, no insurance . . . All is not serene within the ranks of the Lawyers Guild. The story will break soon . . . The Shell Oil Co. and a group of associates spent $200,000 to send a famous engineer to Rumania to survey the oil lands which Hitler covets . . . The engineer returned two days ago—with an unfavorable report.

ONE OF the scenes in "Hellzapoppin" has an old lady planted in the audience who starts to leave when Ole Olsen makes a patriotic speech . . . "Where ya going?" Olsen asks . . . "To the ladies room," the venerable stooge replies . . . Monday night, for the first time in his long career, Olsen muffed his lines. He had seen his "stooge" leave the assigned seat, on cue, but Ole didn't recognize the voice which responded to his query. He didn't recognize it as the voice of the lady usually assigned to the bit . . . and yet it was faintly reminiscent. That voice belonged to a lady who used to work this bit with Olsen until eight years ago . . . She's 74 years old now, and arranged this surprise for Ole. Her name is Catherine Olsen—Ole's mother.

RAYMOND MASSEY, who portrays Abe Lincoln, was asked how it feels to have his picture on all $5 bills. "It feels swell," replied Massey, "but I'd rather have my hands on 'em" . . . Ozzie Nelson, Rutgers' favorite alumnus, will return there tonight to play the Prom . . . Heywood Broun is completing plans for the publication of Broun's Weekly. Bovard, former editor of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, probably will collaborate with him . . . Bert Frohman, who worked for Paramount, will open his Fifty-second street cafe next week. "I quit Hollywood because they had me typed," Frohman laments. "They had me typed—as a singing gangster."

CAPT. UGO d'Annunzio, son of Gabriel d'Annunzio, tendered a party at El Morocco Saturday night . . . His father-in-law, Bertelli—Italy's No. 1 dealer in pharmaceutical wares—was unable to attend, although he's a frequent visitor at El Morocco . . . When Bertelli was there a few nights ago, he asked Jerome Zerbe to photograph him. "And when you'll look at my picture," he stated, "you'll notice a marked resemblance to my family" . . . "You mean," he was asked, "you look like your daughter?" . . . "Oh, no,' he assured. "I look just like Gabriel d'Annunzio."

SOME WEEKS ago, when the New York Film Critics Circle awarded its prize to Alfred Hitchcock for "The Lady Vanishes," the director's American representative, Albert Margolies, immediately phoned Hitchcock in London to apprise him of his good fortune . . . The call was put through at 4 a. m., London time, and the sleep-groggy director answered the phone. "I'm too sleepy to understand you now," Hitchcock yawned. "Cable me about it" . . . The next day at 4 a. m., New York time, Margolies was awakened by a transatlantic phone call . . . "This is Hitchcock," was the sole message. "Never wake a man to tell him a thing like that" . . . Margolies returned to bed and was awakened by another phone call—again from Hitchcock . . . with a one-word message—"Thanks!"

Press Agents Are Stumped By the Truth

Fact and Coincidence Often Stranger Than Fanciful Fiction

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, Feb. 21.—The life of a movie press agent is no cinch; he's always running into some skeptical Hollywood correspondent who figures he's talking through his hat.

Gypsy Rose Lee, the strip-tease dancer, was swimming a while back in the Pacific Ocean. Came a breaker and she was carried out to sea. Coast Guardsmen went after her, pulled her to shore, unconscious, and barely managed to save her life.

That should have been worth a paragraph in anybody's newspaper, but the publicists at Twentieth Century-Fox, where Miss Lee was working at the time, didn't even bother.

"Nobody would believe it," they told the amazed Miss Lee, when, upon her recovery, she suggested that maybe the papers would like to know about her flirtation with death.

All this is by way of introduction to Mary Mayer, a press agent, and her troubles with the press.

Miss Mayer, who is pretty enough to be an actress herself, is charged currently with keeping the public informed on the progress of an M-G-M picture called "The Wizard of Oz."

She was on the set today, wondering what of interest she could find for the Hollywood columnists. The director was busy with a lot of undersized people with green faces, Bert Lahr was complaining, as usual, about the way his cowardly lion costume made him itch, and Frank Morgan was trying on overcoats.

The script called for Morgan to wear an overcoat of the gay Nineties vintage. The wardrobe department had provided him with a wide selection.

He finally chose one of black broadcloth, lined with satin, and made with gores and gussets; it was such an overcoat as the dudes wore in the days of the mustache cup. Morgan strutted around the stage in his new coat and as he took it off, he happened to notice the label inside.

It bore the date, 1889, the trademark of Harry Berger & Co., Chicago tailors, and the name, "L. Frank Baum."

Morgan shouted for the press agent, here indeed was a story, one of those coincidences, because the late L. Frank Baum was the man who wrote the famous "Oz" books. How his coat turned up on the "Oz" picture set was something that nobody could understand.

Miss Mayer began calling the correspondents.

"I don't believe it," the first said.

"Oh, yeah?" the second sneered.

"Fake," the third said.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 21.—I know you're fed up with stories about "Gone With the Wind," but I think this is a honey. After George Cukor left the picture, Vivian Leigh and Olivia de Havilland went to David Selznick's office and put on a crying scene better than any they've had so far in the picture, trying to get him back. Which was so good it sent David home to bed. The story still goes that Clark Gable from the very beginning wanted Vic Fleming to direct it. And Vic was taken off "The Wizard of Oz," on which he'd done a magnificent job, to do it. King Vidor finished "The Wizard." Now if they can only straighten out their story problem, we may have clear sailing ahead, with a breeze to keep away from another "Big Wind."

HEDDA HOPPER

"Let Freedom Ring" with Nelson Eddy is propaganda in palatable form, but put on with pile-driving punch. They could have titled it, "Sell America to Americans," and for the first time in pictures, races are mentioned by name. When the words Jews, Irish, Italian are used, the effect is startling. Because we never think of them as anything but Americans. Nelson sings and slugs and does a peach of a duet with Virginia Bruce, who more than holds up her end. They've got a great all-star cast—Vic MacLaglen, Eddie Arnold, Lionel Barrymore, Guy Kibbee, H. B. Warner, Charlie Butterworth and Sara Padden. I think you'll go for this. I did.

The sneak preview of "Midnight" gave us a new team of lovers—Claudette Colbert and Don Ameche. And does Don muscle in with his sense of reality. It puts Rex O'Malley right in the front trenches as a new English light comedian. A wow of a picture.

The most touching devotion in our town is between Ella Wickersham and her brother, Billy. Ella lost the use of her legs through dancing but gained a spirit which is the envy of all Hollywood.

Hopalong Bill Boyd Cassidy is teaching singing cowgirl, Judith Allen, all his tricks, 'cause she's making a series of those pictures for George Hurliman. Last night Judy gave a birthday and shower party for her mother. It was Judy's birthday, but she said her mother deserved the celebration.

Our latest spring fashion reveals six inches of mother nature, around the waist line. But just let the screen try and get away with it.

Stem Duna, in a whisper of a costume, was the reason extra cops were on the door of stage 5 at Paramount. She puts so much umph in her dance I'm amazed the Hays office passed it. Oh, yes, they saw it! Maybe that's the reason Mr. Hays took a rest.

They were having what is known as tummy trouble. Stem wore a bright red rose instead. Dorothy Lamour was having the same difficulty on the "Man About Town" set where they were rehearsing an Oriental dance. The poor property boy searched the countryside for lotus blossoms to cover poor Dorothy.

When Willie Collier, sr., introduced Eddie Arnold at the Masquer's dinner for Bill Fields, he said, "I could stand up here and tell you a lot of old jokes, but instead I'll introduce you to a man who will." Why, Willie!

One-Act Play Tournament Is Launched at Roosevelt

The first lap of the One Act Play Tournament, which is sponsored each year by the Community Center Department, was run off last night in the Roosevelt High School auditorium before a large and interested group of well-wishers and one-act play "fans." The organizations represented were The Wilson Windjammers, The National City Players Club and The Rock Creek Players.

The curtain raiser of the three plays was John Kirkpatrick's comedy, "A Wedding," presented by The Wilson Windjammers, under the direction of M. Forney Reese. This was followed by "The Lean Years," Mary Katherine Reely's drama which was offered by The National City Players Club, Miss Lena G. Parks, director. The evening closed with The Rock Creek Players, directed by J. Fred Parsons, in James Reach's comedy, "His First Date."

"A Wedding" is a light, frothy bit about—a wedding! There is a good deal of doubt in the minds of the two principal participants about the worth of themselves and each other, as well as that old reliable trick of the farceur—an involution of mistaken identity which manages to work out satisfactorily in the end. If there seems to be a fuzziness about your reviewer's description of this piece it is because the cast seems to have difficulty in projecting their lines out into the theater. Buck Barbee, whom you may remember as "The Barker" at the Sylvan Theater last summer, was the groom, and Valerie Turner, the bride. Leslie Earp, Everett Gay, Josephine Byers, John Guthrie and Dorothy Fortmann made up the rest of the cast.

Playlet Is Radical

While "The Lean Years" fits acceptably into a rather loose definition of what the one-act play can be, certainly, in the strictly academician sense of one-act plays—if such there be—it must admit to being a bit radical. By a series of flashbacks it tells its story. Rather than a story, one might call it a mood, for it shows us a prosperous farm family out in the dust belt who have come through the years on top because of hard work and careful living. Now the boy and girl of the family want some of the luxuries of life and the flashbacks bring us what is going on in the minds of the parents when they are about to refuse the children's request for a new car. It is just such a trick, and use of the imagination, which can keep the one-act plays from being stilted and static and this play was the meatiest of last evening's group.

Probably because there was so much material to work on, the National City Players Club gave it a production which got much of its spirit across to the audience, but the group was hampered by bad lighting and a tendency again to speak too softly for the entire auditorium to hear what was being said. Florence Rice and Ernest Johnson bore the burden of much of this. Miss Rice's performance was particularly commendable. Arthur Wells, Olga Dryden, Suzanne Stiffler and Clifford Weare completed the group.

Father Also Involved

"His First Date" was a one-act play more in the accepted method of the type. It concerned a 16-year-old's crush on a film star, how he managed to make a date with her and how his respectable father decried the disgraceful situation, only to find that he knew Miss Loraine Lotus when she didn't have such a florid name. The cast was completely audible for this one and as a result the audience gave it the largest ovation of the evening. Emily Pickens, as a deaf maid, and Lloyd Abbot, sr., as the father with a past, got chuckles, as did Bennet Jonscher and Virginia Richards, as the Penrod and the Mae West of the piece. Betty Mae Morris was an annoyed sister and Anna W. Priddy was the bridge-playing mother.

Mrs. Adelaide Hibbard, known to all local theatergoers for her endearing work with the National Players, is chairman of the judges. Commander E. Ray McKenzie and Mrs. Aurora M. Poston are her cohorts and to them falls the task of selecting the three best productions of the 15 entered in the tournament.

They will withhold their selections until all the plays have been performed and then on the last evening of the contest, Saturday, March 4, the local drama desks will be the final judges. The remaining 12 plays will be presented on Thursday and Saturday evenings of this week and Tuesday and Thursday of next.

Your Figure, Madame!

—By Ida Jean Kain

Only Film Stars Can Get Away With Being Thin

SOME OF the most beautiful Hollywood figures are flat-chested . . . the designers came out and admitted as much, and it was promptly reported in a woman's magazine.

At first, this seems hard to believe. Flat-chestedness usually is associated with lack of vitality and very poor posture and the movie stars generally carry themselves like royalty and they fairly sparkle with vitality.

But they are also thin girls. Their weight has to be at least 10 pounds under the normal for them to screen slim, and the underweight girl is very often flat-chested. Even though the stars keep superbly healthy on a rigorous routine—plenty of sleep and an astonishing amount of exercise—many of them probably lack the weight for a filled out chest and nicely curved bust. So, the designers to the rescue!

Milk and Vitamins

But the average thin girl's problem is not so easily camouflaged. If you want dimples at the base of the throat, a filled out chest and rounded bust, you will have to make a real effort to gain weight. Probably you will need to improve your posture and vitality, too, but this improvement should parallel your weight gain.

The specific dietary measures which appear to be most helpful in filling out the chest and bust contour are an increased quantity of milk and the inclusion of a vitamin A and D concentrate. The milk and vitamins are, of course, a part of the weight gaining diet.

There are also exercises which will develop the pectoral muscles spreading fanwise across the chest and supporting the bust. A weight gain will assure the necessary fatty tissue for this area, but the firm, rounded contour depends mainly on the tone of these supporting muscles. The following exercise is a good sample of the type that will most effectively tone these muscles and help to improve your figure and posture.

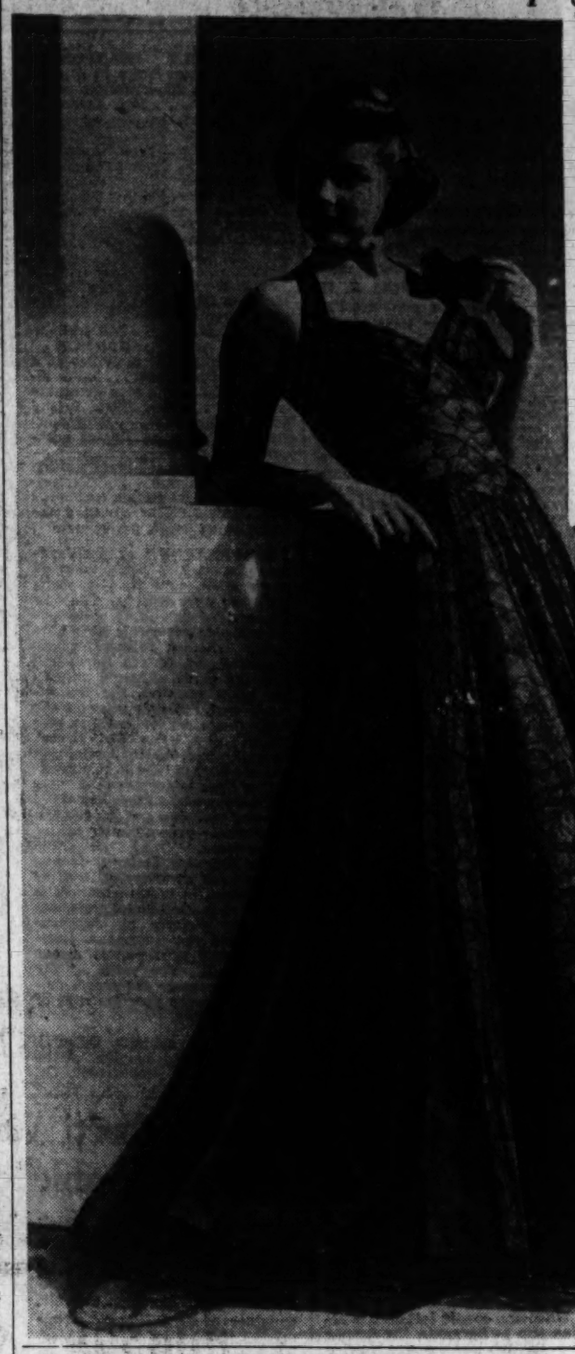
Ice Skating Helps

Stand with feet apart and parallel arms hanging straight down at the sides. Bend the hands back from the wrists, and then, using the upper arm muscles, slowly raise both arms in front of the body until they stretch straight overhead. Do this without hunching the shoulders. Straighten the hands, turn them out at the sides, and slowly lower the arms out at the sides and down, working only the upper arm muscles. Do the exercise slowly and concentrate on those upper arm muscles. Begin with five times and gradually increase to ten each day. Have the room warm, but the windows open for fresh air.

Specific exercise should be considered part of your general build-up program. You will benefit greatly from outdoor activity and should walk for at least 30 minutes a day—preferably for 30 minutes twice a day. Ice skating would do wonders for you.

Since the bust is affected by vitality, posture and weight, the improvement may appear to be rather slow. Do not look for immediate results.

Black Lace Over Champagne Net



Early spring parties call for filmy, light-as-air dance gowns, for gowns in a sentimental mood, yet touched up with a champagne complexion. In this tradition of waltzes and heady wine is this bouffant frock. It is created from yards and yards of shadowy black lace, posed over a foundation of champagne-colored net, and then over taffeta of the same vintage hue. Sooty black taffeta makes the halter. The one and only dress for end-of-the-season proms, and first spring dinner dances

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 21.

RARE INDEED is the chance for an understudy to whirl on the stage and do the work of the boss. That is why Isabelle Kimpal is not unhappy about the flu germ. For only the other night the divine Zorina was severely bitten by that bug and was unable to appear in "I Married an Angel."

ALICE HUGHES

Isabelle said, as she donned her wings, that it was a little bit of Heaven. Not only did she fly down to the stage of the Shubert Theater once, but several times, as Zorina's influenza lasted several days. When she is not understudying the star she is a member of the ballet and is a married lady on her own. Since, on Christmas Eve, Zorina married George Balanchine, the ballet director of the show, they are a couple of girls together.

As for Zorina's marriage it develops that she merely married her teacher and her severest critic. As the bride says, "He makes such demands. More than anyone I've ever seen. He is not easily satisfied, this man. He makes so many things over and over. While I am dancing he tells me my feet are hanging loosely or something awful like that."

Even this is not Zorina's most bitter squawk. "Always it seems he attends a performance where I was not so good," says the beautiful bride. "Nights will go by when I dance perfectly. But no Balanchine. But the night I mistake myself! There he is, making nasty faces."

Such is life in the new home. The fact remains that hundreds of New York men are bemoaning that fact that Zorina married her dancing teacher. They would much prefer that this gorgeous creature had chosen them. Fat chance.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The other day I met Helen Wills Moody on upper Madison avenue, and did she look beautiful! If she is a poker face, I'll take the same. She was wearing a dark beige dress, and the rest of her torso was covered with a lovely silver fox jacket. I have never felt warmly toward La Belle Moody. Her sportsmanship has always seemed lacking. But I must say that she is a gorgeous-looking girl. She is about through with big league tennis. She began by watercolor painting, and now she presumes to write mystery stories. She has a collaborator named Robert Murphy and at present the paid are knocking out a mystery piece with a tennis background. Moreover, she is not really a poker-face these days. Her face shows animation, which means, I take it, that her literary work has given her some pep in the face. In addition, the Moody is no longer that. She is not only pretty, but she shows pep which she never displayed on the tennis court. I hope that from now on I like her rather than view her with a certain amount of distaste.

Girls adore the newest Southern resort jacket for sailing made of mattress ticking denim, striped in red, white and blue . . .

A new name to be reckoned with in style screen credits is that of Eric Moller, who does all the millinery for one of the biggest film companies.

I had a good laugh the other night. The Duchess of Leinster and the Marchioness of Deufferin and Ava have one thing in common. And they hate it. They have identical evening gowns, and occasionally they wear them to the same shindy. It is a full-skirted black evening gown. What a tragedy!

Latest Hollywood street costume—white silk slacks, high-heeled shoes, mink coat, no hat, baby blue handbag.

Fruit Pie Topping

Here is a tasty topping for apple, cherry, rhubarb or apricot pie. When the pie is ready to serve generously spread one and one-half cups of whipped cream blended with half a cup of grated cheese over it. Add a speck of salt to the cream after it has been whipped.

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay,

This Day

I

This is my day, I have done with dreaming
Of what I shall do on the morrow,
Or one week hence; or how I can get this task finished
By half past 9; and the next one ended
On the stroke of 10, and how I may be able
To get the little things all cleaned up neatly
So that I will have some free time just a little later
To read, to rest, to make the most of fleeting moments.

II

I have done with living in some halcyon future,
When I will sit serenely down to get acquainted
With this strange world about me and its wonder,
When petty duties will not press, nor life keep crowding;
For always my mirage of tranquil, detached leisure
Keeps fading further, further in the future
And even if such time should come, these present moments
Will long have fled, their beauty lost, unheeded.

III

And so this morning, standing in my kitchen,
I give myself in full surrender to each second;
I revel in the delicate flavor of fresh earth
Sifted in on the breeze when the door is opened;
In the eager full-throated music of birds that are happy,
In the gracious restrained warmth of the February sun
Pouring in at the windows and highlighting the Delft blue of dishes,
The warm rust of pottery into beauty that is piercing.

IV

Through the frame of my window I gaze at the landscape
That is now gently shedding its drab skin of winter;
At black fretwork of branches all fringed at the edges,
Against a sky that was slate, yet now deepening to blue,
And at cumulous clouds with their first puffy whiteness
Of spring—All this might have passed me,
Its thrill never known, nor its beauty remembered,
By longer delay or by wait till tomorrow.

V

Working in my kitchen, the beautiful quietude
Of the house engulfs me; how assuringly peaceful
The tick of the clock; even the plants in the window
Seem to be happily expanding and growing
Before my very eyes; the brass on the range
Reflects the sunlight; the blue and white of the linoleum
Gleams fresh and clean; the curtains hang crisply;

VI

This is my day, I go now to walk outdoors,
I feel upon me the winds in which the winter
And the spring are warring; it gives me strange excitement;
I see the first green blades of grass, their color
Of that ephemeral freshness no painter ever captures;
I look up into skies that are still, serene and quiet,
Devoid of instruments of death; Thank Heaven this one day of peace

Girls Vote Color In Men's Clothes

That authority on what he thinks women think about men's clothes, luscious Lucius Beebe, who recently declared in print that women like their men drab, should be interested in a poll taken recently at New York's American Woman's Association, in which over two-thirds of the girls said they liked the growing tendency toward more color in men's attire. Most of those venturing opinions were up and coming young business women, well under 30, and engaged in advertising, designing, secretarial work, or still studying.

As regards their own clothes, most of them frankly admitted that they dressed more to please men than they did to please women. The girls felt, however, that they would like to see women's styles change less frequently than they do.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Is Wife "Narrow" in Objecting to Husband's Deriving Main Income From Sale of Mild Intoxicants?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Several months ago my husband went in business with a friend. They operate a suburban wayside grocery and lunch. Their largest revenue is derived from the sale of beer. I am prejudiced against his selling beer for a living, especially since they keep open all day Sunday, this being their banner day for the sale of beer. When I objected to this business, my husband assailed my narrow views and termed me a religious fanatic. He claims if the public wants to buy a legitimate commodity, moderately or to excess, that is the public's business, not his. He claims a right to his share of such expenditures.

I work and help to support our home and have been forced against my will to make big financial sacrifices so that he can endeavor to establish this business. I am to find no fault whatsoever with the fact that he must give his entire attention to his business, thus leaving me to spend my time alone. He never offers to take me out, or feels that I have a right to make a single demand upon his time. If he is at home for an evening, he must rest.

He is sure he is going to make a lot of money, thus assuring himself of financial security. I dislike drinking in any form, and have turned the matter over in my mind and heart for months, and can't reconcile myself to enjoying money he gets from selling beer. Am I narrow? Should I sacrifice our home, if need be, and do just anything he asks that he may have the needed capital to make a go of this deal, if possible?

I want to be fair about it, but have always had my principles that I live up to, in regard to drinking or serving intoxicating liquors to anyone else. I know what my pastor would say, and friends have both agreed and disagreed with me. Please give me your opinion. Very cordially,
F. T. C.

The House Divided

DEAR F. T. C.: While some may argue, in all sincerity, that your husband has the inalienable right to make an honest living, so-called, by whatever legitimate means present themselves, I should say that no partner to any marriage has the right selfishly and obstinately to pursue an occupation which does violence to the rational social conscience of his marital co-partner. The first obligation of each partner, it seems to me, is to co-operate with the other in devising a mutually acceptable and socially feasible program of joint endeavor that progressively guarantees the development of an enduring and harmonious family life.

It is axiomatic that a house divided against itself cannot stand. And for this reason persons considering marriage are nowadays consistently advised by authorities on family relationships to select their partners with an eye to similarity of ethical or moral philosophies, comparable talents and training, and common interests and aspirations. Where discordance of social outlook and moral viewpoint is implicit in a marriage from the beginning, because rooted in the irreconcilably divergent philosophies, and dissimilar talents and training, of husband and wife, you are bound to come sooner or later—and usually sooner—upon just such conflict as this. And the lamentable truth of the matter is that there is almost no hope of healing the breach in a mutually satisfactory way.

You are up against the proposition of one person's making an unconditional surrender of his intrinsic creed, not in the manner of the convert seeing the light as the other person see it, but in the manner of the vanquished warrior conceding defeat and agreeing to a personally punitive truce for the dubious good of "peace at any price;" as against the alternative solution of agreeing to live and let live, which means, of course, dissolving the partnership and going your separate ways, if respective consciences are to be adequately served.

Fundamentally, I am in sympathy with your (perhaps emotional) distaste for all that pertains to traffic in alcoholic beverages, for the reason that I have seen so much actual as well as documentary evidence of its debasing and destructive influence upon the human race. I venture to think that no one can purvey alcoholic beverages for profit without running the risk of sustaining himself and his dependents at the expense of contributing to the demoralization of many individuals, and hence to the retardation of civilized progress toward upper reaches of universal mental, moral and physical health.

I realize, of course, that this may be hailed as the statement of a prude and a provincal; that, over and against it, one may argue with almost irrefutable eloquence and logic the genial attributes of spiritous drinks, citing chapter and verse and impeccable precedents to prove one's point; and that one may take refuge in the pragmatic theory, brilliantly expounded, that the person destroyed by alcoholism was (or is) a person who contained the seeds of destruction within himself, and hence is not to be construed as the victim of legitimate commerce in alcoholic beverages.

Perhaps it is true that society cannot legislate inordinate greed for drink, food, power, profit, etc., etc., out of human nature, but must resort to the infinitely slower process of education to achieve an ultimate and admirable universal temperance of conduct—yet, in the meantime, my sympathies are on the side of those who voluntarily decline willfully to exploit the intrinsically weak. This is a purely personal attitude, and one which I do not seek to foist upon my fellow men, since I feel no zealot's mission to de-alcoholize social interchange. I have seen and I have experienced the mellowing influence, upon normal personalities, of a temperate and casual acquaintance with various kinds of liquors—but it seems to me that whatever pleasure and dubious profit it bestows might easily be foresworn by the hardy in the interests of those to whom its inordinate temptation spells disaster.

To sum up, then—whether your objection to your husband's current enterprise is rooted in bigotry or a larger view; in a false and narrow social pride which draws odious comparisons between differing types of commercial endeavor, or in genuine humanitarian concern, it nevertheless is, in my opinion, essentially on the side of the right. More than that, it is the attitude which your own conscience dictates, and in times of stress, the wisest course which the mentally honest, spiritually truth-seeking person can pursue is that dictated by the "small and quiet" voice of conscience. While he may meet with pain and disappointment in so doing, he will be spared dishonor; and though he may know struggle, he will not suffer shame. M. H.

Today's Health Talk

—By Dr. Logan Clendening

Medical Strides Rapid Since Washington's Day

George Washington was a strong and vigorous man all his life and had little need for doctors. Since he lived before the days of vaccination against smallpox, it is not surprising that he had this disease.

His fatal illness was of only 43 hours' duration, and the physicians who attended him have been severely criticized for the management of the case. This is probably unjust, as they treated him according to the best standards of that day, but it is interesting to speculate on the improvement which modern methods of medicine would have made in the outcome of his disease.

The record which has come down to us in great detail shows that on December 12, 1799, Washington rode about his farm at Mount Vernon from 10 in the morning until 3 in the afternoon. The weather was very bad, a combination of rain, sleet, snow and cold wind, and when he came in the house the clothing about his neck was wet, and snow was hanging from his hair. Being late, he did not wait to change but sat down immediately to dinner in his wet clothes. He began to have some hoarseness in the evening, but made light of it, going to bed early.

At 3 in the morning he awakened his wife because he was having a chill. His throat was extremely painful and swollen and his voice very hoarse. The overseer of the farm was sent for and, at Washington's request, bled him of a pint of blood. A little later he was bled again, but this did not improve his swallowing. Two physicians were summoned, who again bled him, and it was noted that the blood came slow and thick. Blisters, hot flannel and counterirritants were applied to his throat, but none of them gave him any relief. He was convinced that he was going to die and nearly his final request was that he be allowed to die in peace.

According to modern standards, it appears strange that no examination was made of the inside of the throat. The chest was perfunctorily examined, but as there were no stethoscopes in those days, the examination cannot have been very fruitful.

Dr. Aranha Captivates Audience At Women's Press Club Luncheon

'Rio's Strong Man' Answers Barrage Of Questions; Hints U. S. Should Meet Brazilian Terms if It Wants Trade

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

OSWALDO ARANHA, "Rio's strong man" and Brazil's Minister of Foreign Relations, completely captivated his audience yesterday when he answered a barrage of questions following the luncheon meeting of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel.

HOPE R. MILLER

"I shall answer what you ask me," he said at the beginning of his talk. "But you must remember I am a diplomat. If your questions are too difficult, I shall answer in Portuguese!"

Not once, however, did he revert to his native tongue. For well over two hours he "told all" in reply to a variety of questions that touched on everything from the recent Pan-American conference to his reasons fer being in Washington now. He came, he said, to promote trade between this country and his, but it is a problem "to sell a simple, direct and sound idea because you have a presidential race so near," he added, eyes twinkling.

In a more serious vein, he hinted that if the United States is not willing to help Brazil develop economically, totalitarian countries will. He declared Brazil was now buying steadily from Germany and Italy because they accept products in trade. "What you have to sell is more expensive and you ask us to pay cash," he declared.

A brief discussion of the recent conference at Lima precipitated his remark that "Pan-Americanism before has been chiefly an 'easy gesture' and the saying of nice things. The time is ripe for it to become more practical." If Americans fail to co-operate with Brazil now, that country cannot refuse the opportunity to "others," he went on. "We have to open our doors and do our best to keep the keys in our hands."

Mrs. Thurman Arnold Among Guests

Among guests who heard Dr. Aranha were Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, who wore a trim black frock and a snappy black hat, trimmed with a double row of red flowers; Miss Kathryn Lewis, daughter of John L. Lewis, who looked particularly "knowing" while the guest of honor was discussing results of the recent Pan-American Conference which she attended as a delegate; Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., wife of the Maritime Commissioner, who will be feted tomorrow at a "bon voyage" tea given by Mrs. Edward Burke and Mrs. Lewis Schwellenbach. Also present was Decio H. de Moura, First Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, who is also a member of Brazil's commission to the New York World's Fair.

The luncheon was one of many functions at which Dr. Aranha has been honored since he arrived in Washington several days ago. He expects to remain here another week and his calendar will continue to be crowded up until the minute he leaves.

Feted at Dinner Given by Edisons

Last evening Dr. Aranha was guest of honor at a dinner given by the Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison. The party took place at the Hay-Adams House, and later the host and hostess took their 12 dinner guests and a number of other friends to the Mardi Gras ball of the Navy Relief Society. Their company included Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Morse, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Florence Colgate Greble, of Baltimore, who are house guests of the Edisons.

Helen Williams Wedding Is A Surprise

Friends Learn of It on Arriving For Tea

Guests invited to the tea given yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Boone Williams, of Chevy Chase, in honor of their daughter, Helen Harriett, discovered on arrival that much to everybody's surprise, the guest of honor had become Mrs. Howard Knowles earlier in the afternoon, and the tea was in reality a reception following her wedding. No previous announcement of the engagement had been made.

The ceremony took place in the study of Dr. James S. Montgomery, Chaplain of the Senate, who officiated. The bride wore a gray crepe gown made on princess lines, with a blue hat with a pink veil, blue shoes and pink gloves. A corsage of pink roses completed her costume. Both the bride and bridegroom dispensed with attendants.

Mrs. Knowles is a graduate of George Washington University and is a member of Pi Beta Phi Fraternity. Mr. Knowles is an alumnus of the University of California and Harvard Business School and a member of Lambda Chi Alpha, the Rovers Club, and the American Club of Havana. His home is in Macomb, Ill.

Only members of the families attended the wedding. Among the guests were Dr. and Mrs. Elgin Groseclose, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, and their two children, Jane and Nancy; the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Tuttle Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. William Pollard, parents of the latter.

The couple left last night for a motor trip through the South, and will sail from New Orleans for a cruise to the West Indies and Guatemala.

A Dinner Threesome Before Navy Dance

Underwood & Underwood.

Among the many dinners given before the Navy Relief Ball last evening was that at which Miss Elinor Gudger, daughter of Capt. Emmet C. Gudger, U. S. N., and Mrs. Gudger, entertained members of the younger set in this picture, snapped at Miss Gudger's party, are (far right), the debutante hostess; Miss Mary Dora Thompson, another debutante on the season, and Lieut. T. R. Dulin.

Danish Attache Feted at Dinner

The Counselor, of the Danish Legation and Mme. Eickhoff were ranking guests at a dinner given last evening by John V. Hansen at the Shoreham. The host's fiance, Miss Anne Bach, was also present.

Other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Bing, Col. Roy W. Winton, Arthur L. Gale, Dr. and Mrs. George T. Strodl, and Jules Daiber, all of New York; Mrs. William Harrison George and John A. Bach, of Philadelphia; Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Crane, Dr. and Mrs. Howard F. Kane, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Rice, Dr. and Mrs. Roy Lyman Sexton, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Hahn, Mr. and Mrs. Henrik Rand, Anker Bojesen, Miss Emily Voss, Anton Lau and Edward Foreman.

D. C. Society Turns Out For Navy Mardi Gras

2,000 Mingle With Admirals and Officers Of Other Services in Colorful Affair at The Yard; Preceded by Many Dinners

By Elizabeth Henney.

Had a sailor walked into the Harbor at the Mardi Gras Navy Relief Ball at the Sail Loft last night he would have thought he was in a dream combination of all the ports he had ever visited. But chances are, he would have been surprised to find himself in a company studded with high ranking officers of all the services, Army, Navy and Marine Corps, and the cream of Washington society—2,000 strong.

Down the dimly lighted cobble street of the Navy Yard, two tall smoke-grayed buildings, connected by second-floor passageways, and labeled "Gunners' Work Shop" and "Navy Sail Loft," respectively, gave a dismal outlook to arriving guests. But—at the top of the long stairway—spring had arrived.

Potted flowers and plants, tulips, geraniums, azaleas, species of cacti, and all the flowers of spring (donated by the various florists in town for the benefit) blossomed up and down the walls and in every corner. From tall Venetian lampposts hung baskets of flowers.

2 Orchestras Play Through Evening

Boatswain's Mate J. J. O'Hara, who executed the plan of decorations, said the frosted glass in the lampposts were his special invention. "Just dip an old pane of glass in a combination made of flat beer and epsom salts and it'll frost just like real," said he. The results were most effective.

Through the connecting archway into the other building, the Sail Loft had become a grand ballroom. Flags of all nations swung tentlike from the steel beam rafters; the Navy and Marine band orchestras kept music going all evening, and a gypsy group of troubadours wandered through the ballroom and the Harbor at intervals.

The merry group of "peasant maids" at the milk bar, the flower-costumed cigarette girls and flower vendors turned out to be debutantes and Navy officers' wives and daughters in disguise. A colorful note was added by the gold-braided uniforms of members of the Netherlands Commission.

With a patroness list headed by Mrs. Roosevelt, and the first box-holder being the Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, last evening's annual benefit for Navy relief drew as many prominent members of Washington society, Army, Navy and Marine Service sets, as could crowd into the Sail Loft, which has the biggest dance floor in Washington.

Navy Notables in Receiving Line

In the receiving line were Mrs. Swanson, wife of the Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy; Mrs. William D. Leahy, wife of Admiral Leahy, the Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. George T. Pettengill, wife of the commandant of the Navy Yard.

Mrs. Swanson had with her the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph William Close; Capt. and Mrs. Edgar Wood, Capt. and Mrs. J. R. Beardall, Miss Martha Conley, of Frederick, Md., and Mrs. Swanson's son, Douglas Hall.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Charles Edison entertained at dinner at the Carlton Hotel before the ball, later taking their dinner guests and a number of other friends to their box at the Sail Loft. Guests were Minister of Foreign Affairs of Brazil Oswaldo Aranha, Senator David I. Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor and their house guest, Mrs. E. C. King; the Assistant Secretary of War, Louis Johnson; Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory S. Land, Capt. and Mrs. I. C. Johnson, and the Naval Attache from Brazil, Lieut. Comdr. Raul Reis, and Mme. Reis.

Also with Assistant Secretary and Mrs. Edison at the ball were Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Noble, Stuart McDonald, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Compton, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright, Commander and Mrs. Harold Nelson, Commander and Mrs. A. Loring Swazey, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, Mrs. Samuel A. Halsey, Commander and Mrs. J. B. Noble, Mrs. Clara Murdock and Douglas Johnson.

Mrs. Leahy Has Several Guests

Mrs. William D. Leahy had with her several guests, including her son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. William H. Leahy, Dr. and Mrs. R. S. Beale, Mr. and Mrs. John Wetherill, Mrs. William L. Freseman and Mr. and Mrs. James F. Greene.

The Chief of the Bureau of Navigation, Rear Admiral J. O. Richardson, and Mrs. Richardson entertained at dinner preceding the ball and with guests occupied a box at the Sail Loft. Guests in their box were Capt. and Mrs. Frank Jack Fletcher, Capt. and Mrs. William W. Galbraith and Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Ellis.

Miss Sally Holmes, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes, entertained at dinner and at the ball in honor of her house guest, Miss Exelyn Gould, of New York City. Mrs. Holmes, who was in charge of the Harbor, was directly responsible for the enchanting little village effect produced.

Buffet Supper Precedes Dance

Capt. and Mrs. Emmet C. Gudger entertained at a buffet supper in honor of their daughter, Miss Elinor Gudger, who is here from Mount Holyoke College for the ball. Guests were members of the debutante committee and their escorts.

Mrs. Robert M. Griffin also entertained at dinner preceding the event, having as her guests Commander and Mrs. Frederick Richards, Commander and Mrs. John D. H. Kane, Commnader and Mrs. J. Beresford Waller, Commander and Mrs. William S. Popham, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest J. Swift, Commander and Mrs. Greene W. Dugger, Commander and Mrs. Samuel R. Shumaker, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Harry B. Slocum, Commander Lloyd J. Wiltse and William G. Elmslie.

Dining with Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Lowry B. Stephenson at their quarters in the Navy Yard were Col. and Mrs. Charles F. B. Price, Col. and Mrs. Harry Schmidt, Col. and Mrs. William Rupertus, Capt. and Mrs. Joseph E. McDonald, Capt. and Mrs. Clarence N. Himkamp, Capt. and Mrs. Arthur Mayo and Mr. and Mrs. John M. Rogers.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

MR. AND MRS. Robert Young are among those who will go over to England to see the Grand National on March 24. They plan to sail March 9 on the Manhattan, will land at Queenstown and will stop off in Ireland for several days for fox hunting. They will also hunt with Belvour Hounds in England. This is Mr. Young's third trip over for the Grand National, but it will be Mrs. Young's first experience at the international sports classic.

They will return home on April 7, getting back to Virginia in time for the spring race meeting of the Middleburg Hunt, which will take place the middle of April.

MRS. RICHARD WHITNEY, of New York, and her daughter, Miss Alyce Whitney, have been in Virginia for several days visiting Mrs. Whitney's son, Sammy Sands, and meeting his fiancee, Miss Elizabeth Dame. The engagement of Miss Dame and Mr. Sands was announced last week, and though the exact date of the wedding has not yet been told, it will most likely take place in the near future.

Miss Jacqueline Meredith, of Virginia and Washington, will go to Lexington on Friday to attend the midwinter dances at V. M. I. to be given Friday and Saturday nights.

DANIEL SANDS, M. F. H. of Middleburg Hunt, who has returned from Thomasville, Ga., where he went on a shooting trip with Houghton Metcalf, was out on a Monday at the meet at Maxville. Among others out were Miss Charlotte H. Noland, comaster of the hunt; Mrs. Rosemary Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Crompton Smith, Miss Bettina Belmont, Miss Anne Leith, and William Cottington, of Cooperston, N. Y., who is the guest of Stephen Clark.

Others hunting were Mrs. June Brainard and Thomas Badger, of Groton, Mass., who are visiting Harry Worcester Smith at his hunting box in Middleburg. Still others were Mrs. Norman Toerge, Mrs. John Hay Whitney, Miss Elizabeth Hulbert, Miss Natalie Hazard, Mrs. Rigan McKinney, Mrs. Holger Bidstrup, Mr. and Mrs. Turner Wiltshire, Miss Laura Sprague, Miss Nannie Fred, Miss Dorothy Fred, Mrs. Livingston Hazard, Miss Connie Regan, Jack Skinner, Jamie McCormick, Henry Frost, T. Beatty Brown, Rodgers Fred, Stephen Clark and Newell Ward.

Mr. and Mrs. Montague and their two daughters, Miss Polly Montague and Miss Rosalie Montague, are in Middleburg at the Carrington home, where they will be for several weeks.

Mrs. Herbert May Is Honored at Tea

Mrs. Herbert May, who, with Mr. May, is here from Geneva for a visit, shared honors with Miss Lucille Swan, the sculptress, at a small tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. John Carter Vincent at her Georgetown apartment.

Other guests were Mrs. Hugo Black, Mrs. Howell Moorhead and Mrs. Frank West.

Dempseys Hosts At Dinner Party

William J. Dempsey, general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, and Mrs. Dempsey entertained at a small dinner last night at the Shoreham Blue Room in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Daley.

Among the guests were the host's sisters, the Misses Muriel and Mary Dempsey, of Santa Fe, who are here to visit their parents, Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey.

Leslie Bratton Becomes Bride Of Army Officer

Wedding Advanced as Lieut. Van Vliet Shifted To Post in Hawaii

A shift in orders moved an important wedding up a notch in the calendar when Miss Leslie Sumter Bratton yesterday became the bride of Lieut. John H. H. Van Vliet, jr. The marriage had been scheduled for later in the season, but Lieut. Van Vliet's recent assignment to a post in Hawaii from Fort Washington, Md., changed plans at the last moment.

Because of illness in the family, the ceremony which took place at the Bethlehem Chapel at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, was a very quiet one. Dean Noble Powell officiated. The bride is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Sumter Bratton, of this city, while Lieut. Van Vliet is the son of Col. and Mrs. H. H. Van Vliet, of Washington, Pa.

Gown Is Trimmed In Heirloom Lace

Escorted by her father, Miss Bratton wore a dress of eggshell chiffon velvet trimmed with point lace which had belonged to her great-great-grandmother. The lace was also used on a dress which her great-great aunt wore when she was presented to the Empress Eugenie at the Tuileries in Paris. The train of Miss Bratton's gown, elaborately embroidered in chrysanthemums in seven shades of gold had been worn by her mother when the latter attended courts of the Emperor and Empress of Japan. Her string of pearls was the gift of her father and mother, and she carried a bouquet of pale yellow sweetheart roses and yellow freesias trimmed with a large pale yellow bow.

Miss Mary Betts, the daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Thomas I. Betts, was maid of honor and the only attendant. She was attired in blue taffeta, fashioned in princess style. Her veil was of blue net and she, too, carried yellow sweetheart roses and freesias. Lieut. Leigh Fairbank served as best man.

Couple Leave on Trip to Bermuda

At the small reception which followed the ceremony, Mrs. Bratton, mother of the bride, wore sapphire blue chiffon velvet. Mrs. Van Vliet, the mother of the bridegroom, was in purple crepe with a matching hat. Also assisting was Mrs. Beale Bloomer, godmother of the bride.

When the couple left on a wedding trip to Bermuda, the former Miss Bratton was wearing a beige suit and matching accessories. Her topcoat was of camel's hair, trimmed with lynx fur and she had a corsage of yellow roses. Lieut. and Mrs. Van Vliet will sail for Hawaii in June.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Idaho and a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority. She is a descendant of Col. William Bratton and Col. William Winn, both of the Revolutionary War period. Lieut Van Vliet is the grandson of Gen. Stuart Van Vliet and great-great-grandson of Capt. Jacob Brown, after whom Brownsville, Tex., was named.

Leland Harrisons To Be Feted Here At Dinner Parties

The United States Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison, who will arrive on Friday to visit Mr. and Mrs. George A. Garrett, will be guests of honor at a dinner to be given by their hosts that evening.

Saturday Mr. and Mrs. Philip Coffin will entertain at dinner in their honor and on Tuesday, March 28, the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom will fete the Harrisons. The Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu will honor them on Thursday, March 2.

Mrs. Walter Distler Gives Luncheon to 20

Mrs. Walter G. Distler was hostess yesterday at one in a series of luncheons she is giving this season. The party, at which there were 20 guests, took place at the Sulgrave Club.

On Monday Mrs. Distler gave a luncheon for 14 at the Chevy Chase Club.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

IMPOSSIBLE IMAGININGS: Mrs. Truxtun Beale in a night club . . . Mrs. Albert Dewey wearing rubbers . . . Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., at a concert . . . Mrs. Richard V. Oulahan reading True Detective . . . an embassy reception without the Sol Blooms.

DUDLEY HARMON

Mrs. C. Mathews Dick on a camping trip . . . Mrs. S. Kent Legare directing the activities of a troupe of Girl Scouts . . . J. Pierrepont Moffat eating at a drugstore counter . . . Mrs. Mark Bristol being disagreeable . . . Representative Edith Nourse Rogers without a corsage.

Leone Fumasoni-Biondi writing a social column . . . Clarence Hewes driving a station wagon . . . Mrs. Joseph Leiter covering the police court for a newspaper.

ENTERTAINING at the Japanese Embassy is being resumed again after more than a year's period of nary a party. The new Ambassador and Mme. Horinouchi will give a musicale early next month when a talented young Japanese girl, Chieko Hara, will play the piano. Though only in her early twenties, she has already captured first prize at the Paris Conservatoire and has also played in Warsaw and Berlin. Recently married in Japan, she and her husband are in this country on their honeymoon.

Mme. Horinouchi was hostess at a tea on Saturday and she and the Ambassador gave a dinner earlier in the week.

The Japanese Embassy is one of the most attractive, as well as the newest, in Washington. It is furnished in Occidental style, except for pictures by Japanese artists and two enormous, fascinating suits of Japanese armor in the hall. The walls of the downstairs rooms are cream colored and on the floor are rugs of a brilliant blue.

WHILE on subjects Oriental, Miss Yoeh Wang, daughter of the former Chinese Ambassador, Dr. C. T. Wang, has returned quietly to Washington and is studying at the Chevy Chase School. While serving here as her father's official hostess (her mother never came on from China and she was the oldest of his daughters), Miss Wang found time to sandwich in some courses at George Washington University.

After his recall as envoy here, Dr. Wang lingered on in New York for some time before finally setting sail for China. His successor is the present Ambassador, Dr. Hu-Shih, who has been at a New York hospital for a great part of his stay in this country.

PARTY NOTES: Dr. Hans Thomsen, Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, will entertain at dinner next Tuesday. Frau Thomsen is vacationing in Florida . . . Mrs. James McHugh will give a cocktail party on Friday afternoon, March 3, in honor of her sister, Mrs. Petro Pavlowski, who has arrived from China, where her husband is in engineering work. She is visiting her father, Dr. Jacob Gould Schurman, former Ambassador to Germany, at the Anchorage. Later she expects to stay with another sister, Mrs. John Magruder, wife of Col. Magruder.

ODDS AND ENDS: Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding have returned from a vacation at Jekyll Island, where the sun came out for the first time only on the day of their departure . . . Everybody who has seen the attractive new Hungarian Legation on Albemarle street hopes that it won't be unoccupied during the summer, as there is a swimming pool and tennis court attached. The living room is one of the loveliest and largest in Washington. It has pale green decoration and a little alcove at one end. The whole effect is less like a legation than a home. The Pelenyis lease this house from an Army officer . . . To show how Brenda Frazier-conscious publicists have become, a news photograph sent recently from Nassau, where the heiress is vacationing, has captions which begin apologetically, "Though Brenda Frazier does not happen to be in this picture, several of her admirers are."

Count Roberti Attends Wedding Of Miss Trimble to Count Revedin

Count Guerino Roberti, Secretary of the Italian Embassy, was a witness at the wedding in New York on Monday afternoon of Miss Margaret Randolph Trimble, daughter of Mrs. Richard Trimble, of New York, and the late Mr. Trimble, to Count Giovanni Revedin, of the Italian diplomatic service, oldest son of the Marchese and Marchesa di San Martino Revedin, of Rome and Ferrara. Count Roberti represented the Charge d'Affaires of the Embassy, Giuseppe Cosmelli, who was unable to attend because of illness.

Among others at the wedding from Washington were the Misses Anne and Mary Randolph, cousins of the bride. The former returned to the Capital yesterday, but her sister will linger in New York for a few days.

The ceremony took place in the Our Lady Chapel of St. Patrick's Cathedral, the Rev. J. Francis A. McIntyre officiating, assisted by the Rev. Charles P. Kellenberg. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Richard Trimble, wore a gown of white crepe with a veil of old family lace. Her only attendant was her sister, Mrs. Perry Rodgers Pease, of New York, who wore a gown of chartreuse colored silk jersey and a matching headdress of ostrich feathers. Gaetano Vecchiotti, the Italian consul general in New York.

Count Revedin and his bride will sail soon for Italy and will then go to Budapest, where he is Second Secretary of the Italian Legation.

The bride, who has many friends in Washington, attended the Brearley School in New York and Miss Porter's in Farmington, Conn. Her father, who died in 1924, was for 21 years secretary and treasurer of the United States Steel Corporation.

Mrs. C. C. Glover, jr., To Attend Prom

Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., will go to New Haven, Conn., this week for the dance of the junior class at Yale University, of which her son, Charles C. Glover 3d, is a member. Mrs. Glover is among the patronesses for the prom, set for Friday evening.

Miss Joan Wilkinson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Theodore S. Wilkinson, will be Mr. Glover's guest at the dance. She will go to New Haven on Friday from Poughkeepsie, where she is attending Vassar College.

Peppers in New York

Senator and Mrs. Claude D. Pepper are at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York.

Henry Wallaces Entertain for 14 at Dinner

The Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace entertained at dinner last evening in their apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. There were 14 guests.

The party was one in a series Secretary and Mrs. Wallace are planning for this season. They will entertain again early in March.

Farley Attends Vanderbilt Party

Postmaster General Farley was among the guests yesterday at a luncheon given by Cornelius Vanderbilt at the Surf Club in Miami Beach, Fla.

Others in the company were Mrs. Fred Warren, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Morin, Percy Pyne 2d and Col. Robert G. Elbert. On Saturday, Col. Elbert was host to the same group at the Big Top Gala, a circus party.

Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Garnet W. Ault entertained at luncheon yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel. There were 24 guests.

Gabriela Mistral, Chilean Poet, Honored at Luncheon Here

Writer-Diplomat Talks of Problems Of Latin America

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

A poet who wields words with powerful purpose behind them is Gabriela Mistral, Chilean teacher, writer and diplomat, guest of honor and speaker at a luncheon arranged yesterday by the People's Mandate Committee at the Carlton Hotel.

She spoke in Spanish. Those who did not understand the language watched the earnestness and strength of her face as she talked and waited for the brief pauses in which Mrs. Thomas Burke, herself a Chilean, and wife of Thomas Burke, chief of the division of international communications of the State Department, acted as interpreter.

Miss Mistral had been asked to discuss the proposed friendship trip of Latin-American women to this country under the auspices of the People's Mandate Committee. She did so with practical suggestions for a "moral itinerary."

"The People's Mandate will do us a great service by taking its guests to see the United States institutions that are working to improve agricultural life," said Miss Mistral, pointing out that the Latin countries were primarily agricultural and that the welfare of the rural masses most deserved attention.

"All the problems connected with children are, at the present moment, the basis of Government programs in Chile and in countries on the Pacific Coast," she said. "We are experiencing the tragedy of unprotected children, which to me is like a live coal at my heart."

Miss Mistral, asserting that in South America the child was "the being to whom justice had not yet been done," explained that their economic resources were still unequal to the program they had laid out. "We need to know, here, as in Europe, the types of social work applied to child welfare, types that not only efficacious but also workable."

Seek Solution Of Labor Problems

"It would be good for the visitors from our shores—who are not making a mere pleasure trip, who are coming not to a party but to a stupendous human workshop—to learn from you also about women in industry. Our women leaders are carrying on a determined struggle against irritating injustices common in South America and even in Europe. You have already done away with this old evil. Tell us how you reached this state of parity which, although the most reasonable in the world, has nowhere been easily achieved."

There was poetry of expression throughout Miss Mistral's talk on the human problems facing her country and the other South American republics. The luncheon illustrated the mutual appreciation of culture and progress which the People's Mandate Committee desires to help foster between the United States and Latin-American countries.

Mrs. Burke, who is Latin-American chairman for the committee, in introducing Miss Mistral, announced that the Chilean leader had declined the recently proffered ministership to five Central American countries in favor of a more tranquil post as Chilean consul at Nice.

Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the People's Mandate Committee, presided at the luncheon. The proposed friendship tour being planned by the committee, will bring Latin-American women to this country on a good-will visit such as was made to South America by the Flying Caravan, of which Mrs. Burke was a member last year, she said.

Miss Lenroot Pays Tribute

Miss Katharine Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, was among the guests introduced by Miss Vernon, and spoke briefly of her visit to Miss Mistral's school in Chile and of her famous poems including "Prayer of a Teacher."

Dr. Esther Brunauer, of the American Association of University Women, also spoke. She declared that "at this moment, when we might be tempted to question the validity of our ideals for international friendship, our faith is renewed by the closer contacts being made by women of North and South America. It makes a firmer foundation under our structure and we all have a part in pouring that foundation."

Among the guests were: Mme. Recinos, wife of the Guatemalan Minister; Mme. Vitieri, wife of the chairman of the Ecuadorian Boundary Commission; Mme. de Boyd, wife of the Minister of Panama; Mme. Castro Beeche, wife of the Costa Rican Minister; Mrs. Hoffman Philip, wife of a former United States Ambassador to Chile; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, of the Civil Service Commission; Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, of the Social Security Board. Dr. Irene Wright, of the State Department; Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Miss Mary Anderson, chief of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

Miss Mary Winslow, newly appointed representative on the Inter-American Commission of Women; Mrs. Concho Romero James, of the Pan American Union; Mrs. Ruth Shipley, of the State Department; Mrs. Mercedes Del Pulgar, of New York, mother of Mrs. Burke; Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, Mrs. John Donaldson, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs, who attended the Liman Conference; Mrs. Whitman Crass, president of the Washington Club; Miss Emma T. Hahm, president of the Zonta Club; Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, director of the Woman's Division of the Democratic National Committee; Mrs. Thomas P. Ahrens, Mrs. Prentiss Coonley, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Philip Eaton, Mrs. Charlton Putnam, Dr. Edith S. Coale, Mrs. Jeter H. Horton, and Mrs. J. W. McMillan.

Citizens Back Independent School Board

Groups Vote Contrary To Griffenhagen Plan; Elected Leadership Favored

Washington residents, judging from the action of civic bodies last night, want the Board of Education to be continued as an independent agency, contrary to recommendations of the Griffenhagen experts for its absorption as an adjunct of a reorganized District government.

In a majority of cases, citizens' groups meeting last night also favored an elected rather than an appointed school board. The large portion of the organizations also urged further enfranchisement of District residents by providing for election of the council to which the Griffenhagen report would assign supervision of the city administration.

Reports of the meetings follow:

Columbia Heights

Any changes in the appointment and functions of the Board of Education, as proposed in the Griffenhagen report, were opposed by the Citizens Forum of Columbia Heights in a resolution adopted unanimously.

The former also adopted unanimously a resolution by A. M. Edwards approving the basic principles of the report regarding the relation of the District of Columbia to the Federal Government, and the proposed new powers for the District government.

The resolution further proposed that the legislative council should be elected.

The substitution of 7 departments for the present administrative angencies was indorsed, with the exception of the school board. It was urged that all officials of the new government be residents of the District, except that nonresidents might be appointed administrator, superintendent of schools, health officers, librarian and public works director.

It was resolved officials should be appointed and removed by the administrator with the consent of the council.

The resolution also indorsed the Overton formula for determining the Federal Government's contribution to the general fund, but added that land owned by foreign governments and institutions exempted from taxes by act of Congress should be counted as Federal property for this purpose, and that the Federal Government should also contribute to the water fund and the road fund.

Other resolutions urged the superintendent of schools, the principal of Central High School and the Central High School Parent-Teacher Association to discourage girls from hich-hiking, and urged Congress to appropriate funds to begin construction of the proposed new building for Wilson Teachers' College this year.

Petworth

The eight-point program approved by the Federation of Citizen's Association Saturday night was indorsed by the Petworth Citizen's Association.

The association, in a split vote, backed its Federation delegate, Horace J. Phelps, who voted for the plan Saturday.

The program, similar to the Griffenhagen reorganization plan, calls for election of all municipal legislators. While it approves the Griffenhagen idea of departmentalization of executive functions, it calls for an elective and autonomous Board of Education.

A more liberal appropriation for the maintenance of schools and school grounds than was allowed by the Bureau of the Budget in the appropriation measure now before Congress was discussed and a motion to ask for Congressional action in enlarging the figure set was unanimously approved.

The group voted to comply with a request of the "Dry Forces of the District of Columbia" to indorse legislation abolishing all package liquor stores in favor of Government owned liquor dispensaries. They also indorsed a law for scientific medical examination of suspected drunk drivers.

Herbert S. Wood, tax expert in the Treasury Department, speaking for the Citizen's Committee for Fair Taxation, spoke against the so called "combination" sales and income tax program prepared by the Commissioner's Tax Committee, calling it "cruel" and "an act of economic madness."

Southeast Council

The Southeast Council of Citizens Associations moved to put a man from their section in the vacancy left on the school board by the resignation of Henry I. Quinn. Southeast Washington is not now represented on the board.

The council agreed to submit the name of one of its members, W. W. Lee. Appointive power is in the hands of the District Court.

Robert L. Haycock, assistant superintendent of schools, told the council that there was a good chance of improving and adding to the Southeast schools. He outlined the plan of the school board to turn the French and Lenox schools into vocational centers for boys and girls.

The council supported plans for a municipal auditorium at the end of East Capitol street, a bridge across the Anacostia at East Capitol, extension of the street to the District line; and opposed any move to locate the municipal lodging house to the Southeast area, and the transfer of the Occoquan dock to a location just above the Navy Yard.

Georgia Ave. Businessmen

The Griffenhagen report was indorsed "in principle" by the Georgia Avenue Business Men's Association.

The organization urged, however, that the city council and manager be elected by citizens of the Capital rather than appointed by the President.

Taxation of Federal property within the District as outlined by the bill sponsored by Senator Overton, of Louisiana, also won the approval of the group.

The association went on record in favor of the proposed sales tax and taxes on incomes over $14,000.

Leader Tells How Palestine Aids Refugees

Delegate to Pioneer Women Describes Training Course

Harassed on one side by the Arabs and menaced on the other by the danger Great Britain may close their homeland, the Jews of Palestine fight courageously on, Mrs. Yehudith Simchonit, of Palestine, told members of the Pioneer Women's Organization at the Jewish Community Center last night.

Ninth annual delegate of the Workingwomen's Council of Palestine to the American organization, Mrs. Simchonit's major interest in the land of her adoption from 1921, has been the advancement of cultural life. Recently she has been in charge of German refguee youth in her own colony of Tel Yoseph, where the newcomers are put through a course of training which includes working in the fields in the morning and fours hours' study in the afternoon.

Later the newcomers are either allocated to other co-operative colonies of the Mandate or financed by the Jewish National Fund, to form a new co-operative colony of their own. At least 80 per cent of the refugees remain in agriculture, she said.

Justice Official Critically Hurt By Street Car

Julius C. Martin, 76, of the Kennedy-Warren Apartment, director of the Bureau of War Risk Litigation, Department of Justice, suffered head injuries, fractured nose and right wrist when knocked down by a streetcar at Eleventh street and Pennsylvania avenue yesterday.

Police said the car was operated by Jack S. Jeter, 28, 1309 Irving street northwest. He was not held.

Meanwhile, a coroner's jury held that two recent traffic deaths were accidental.

The death of William A. Myers, colored, 73, 1229 T street northwest, was found "due to the negligence of the deceased." The verdict exonerated Joseph Dillard, colored, 32, 1116 Sixth street northwest, whose automobile struck Myers.

Irving Jordan, 52, 413 U street northwest, motorist, was absolved from blame in the second traffic case—the death of 10-year-old Clayton Washington, colored, 4925 Deane avenue northeast.

Capital News In Brief

A comely young secretary was introduced to Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, but is her face red!

Entering the elevator, she asked for the third floor and noticed there was only one other passenger.

As the elevator whistled past her stop, she stormed at the operator: "Who do you think you are, Harry Hopkins?"

"No, ma'am," he replied. "But Harry Hopkins is in this car."

Bandit Cuts Woman Victim

Miss Stella Levi, of the 1600 block of Euclid street northwest, a stenographer at the National Labor Relations Board, was cut on the hand last night when her purse was snatched by a well-dressed man at Sixteenth and Belmont streets northwest.

Peacemaker Killed

An innocent bystander, George Houston, 65, colored, of the 1500 block of Marion street northwest, was shot and killed last night in a restaurant in the 1700 block of Seventeenth street northwest.

Detective Sergt. William (Doc) Liverman, of the homicide squad, who investigated the killing, reconstructed the affair as follows:

Sylvester Hill, 29, colored, of the 1400 block of Eighth stret northwest, "started throwing chairs" in the restaurant. Azz Howell, 29, proprietor of the establishment, asked Hill to be quiet. Hill threw a chair at Howell, who drew a revolver from under the counter and fired. The bullet, aimed at Hill, struck Houston under the heart as he tried to act as peacemaker.

Both Hill and Howell were being held last night.

Embassy Auto Runs Down Man, Chauffeur Pays $5

Harry Sumner, 22, chauffeur for the Brazilian Embassy, last night was charged with failing to give right of way to a pedestrian after the embassy car he was driving struck and injured a man at Massachusetts avenue and S street northwest.

Vernon P. Wilson, 46, of 2650 Wisconsin avenue northwest, suffered a hip injury and was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Sumner, who lives at 7100 Wisconsin avenue northwest, did not plead diplomatic immmunity, but instead paid $5 collateral.

D. C. Guard, 1,200 Strong, Parades to Hall

Randolph Praises Group at Exercises For Gen. Washington

Twelve hundred District National Guardsmen marched into Departmental Auditorium last night for exercises that commemmorated George Washington's birthday and symbolized America's national defense.

The total District Guard strength, soldiers representing five different corps paraded down Constitution avenue from the Guard Armory to the auditorium. Troop divisions included 121st Engineers, the 260th Coast Artillery, the Twenty-ninth Division, special troops; First Battalion, Quartermasters Corps, and Company A, of the 372d Infantry.

The engineer and coast artillery bands kept time as the soldiers filed to their seats. Capt. Simpson B. Daugherty, engineer chaplain, pronounced an invocation prayer.

The principal speaker, Representative Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, praised the National Guard as a preparedness organization but demanded the United States refrain from "policing the world."

"If ever there was a time when America was justified in seeking the highest type of armament it is now . . . but we must raise that sword not as an aggressor but as a defender," Randolph asserted.

Randolph proposed a country-wide referendum to decide whether or not this country is to participate in a "foreign war."

Ruhland Cites Vote on Gallinger

Health Officer George C. Ruhland yesterday declared minutes taken at a meeting last week with his advisory committee would bear him out that "no dissenting voice" was raised against his plan to retain control over the major departments at Gallinger Hospital.

Dr. Stirling Ruffin, member of the committee, had written a letter of protest after reports stated the committee had voted "unanimously" in favor of Dr. Ruhland's plan.

Lent Starts With Rites in City Churches

Services Beginning At 6:15 A. M. to Mark Arrival of Ash Wednesday

Forty days of Lenten devotions begin today as Protestants and Catholics mark Ash Wednesday with traditional services.

Leading the Episcopalian observance, more than 500 communicants are expected at 8 a. m. at Washington Cathedral for the eleventh annual Corporate Communion of the Potomac Assembly of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew. The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will officiate at the "Ter Sanctus" altar.

Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court will preside at a brotherhood conference and Lenten breakfast in the activities building of St. Albans School.

Dr. Phillips to Preach

Ash Wednesday services at the Cathedral will include Holy Communion in Bethlehem Chapel at 7:30 a. m.; reading of the Litany at 10 a. m.; morning prayer and penitential office at 11 a. m., and evening prayer at 4 p. m. The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell will preach at the two latter services.

Services at Epiphany will begin at 7:30 a. m. with a corporate communion for men and boys. Dr. Ze-Barney Phillips, rector, will preach at 10 a. m. in services of Litany, penitential offices and Holy Communion. The 25-minute noonday programs, to continue until Good Friday, will be inaugurated at 12:05 p. m. with an address by the Rev. Karl L. Tiedeman, O. H. C.

The Rev. Reno S. Harp, jr., rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Takoma Park, will speak at Epiphany at 4:45 p. m., as the Washington Federation of Chuches begins its annual series of services, each Wednesday at the same hour.

Catholics Hold to Ritual

Catholic churches, alone among Washington congregations, hold to the ancient ritual of distributing ashes. The ashes, from plams burned last Palm Sunday, are placed in the sign of the cross on a communicant's forehead, as the priest intones, "Remember, man, that thou are dust and unto dust thou shall return."

At St. Matthew's masses will be celebrated at 6:15, 7, 8 a. m. and 12:10 p. m., with evening services at 8 p. m. Similar programs have been planned to usher in Lent at other Catholic churches.

Dr. John K. Cartwright, rector of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, will offer a requiem mass for repose of the soul of Pope Pius XI at 12:15 p. m.

All Methodism Unites

Historic interest is attached to services at 8 o'clock tonight at Foundry Methodist Church, where, for the first time, members of three branches of Methodism will unite in Ash Wednesday rites.

The Rev. Robin Gould, pastor of Francis Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church South, will be principal speaker. Other participating clerics will be Dr. E. C. Makosky, Clarendon Protestant Church; Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, host church pastor; the Rev. John Trader, Lewis Memorial Methodist Protestant, and Dr. Clifton K. Ray, Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church South.

With Dr. Gerhard E. Lenski preaching, Grace Lutheran Church will launch Wednesday Lenten services at 8 o'clock tonight. Others to be heard during the season will be Dr. Henry Koch, Columbus, Ohio; Dr. Ewald Lawson, president of Upsala College, Orange, N. J.; Dr. Gould Wickey, of Washington, and the Rev. T. Rene Meyer, New York.

The Lutheran Ministerial Association of Washington will hold the first of a series of Lenten services next Monday at 8 p. m., at Luther Place Memorial Church, with the Rev. Henry E. Koch, executive director, of the Federation of Luther Leagues of the American Lutheran Church, as speaker. Subsequent programs will be at Grace, Reformation, Keller Memorial and Atonement Lutheran churches.

Symphony Fund Drive Ends Today; 58 Pct. Subscribed

Although the drive for funds with which to support the National Symphony Orchestra closes today, only $64,940.73 of the $111,000 necessary for its operation during the 1939-40 season had been raised yesterday. This is 58.51 per cent of the goal.

This figure is about $6,000 less than the amount raised in the same period in last year's campaign.

Committee chairmen reporting at a luncheon at the Carlton Hotel were not pessimistic, however, as returns from Government agencies and the schools have just started to come in.

Retired Railroader Can't Quit Going to Office, Puts in Full Day

HOWELL COBB PEEPLES

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding that so-called "old age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Mrs. Howell Cobb Peeples knew her husband too well to think that when he was retired he would stop going to his office in the Southern Railway Building.

After 53 years of working he found it practically impossible to divorce himself from the atmosphere and associations which had not only molded his career but helped fashion his character. And so, although he was retired last September as district freight agent for the Southern, he still goes down to the office every day in the week, arriving at 9 or 10 a. m. and leaving sometimes as late as 6 o'clock.

He doesn't do any work, of course, just passes the time of day with friends and occupies an unused office on the fifth floor, reading newspapers and magazines. There is not even a telephone in the room, hence his privacy is completely undisturbed.

"When I came up for physical examination just before retirement," says Mr. Peeples, "the doctor told me he wished he was as sound as I am. I don't think I missed two weeks from work because of illness during my entire term of service."

The former freight agent is tall, with thinning white hair. He has a deep, strong voice which any trial lawyer might envy.

"That's what I always wanted to be, a lawyer," he says. "My father was a judge in Fulton County (Ga.) Superior Court when he died. One of my brothers also took up law, but I got into railroading as a youngster and the hours were too long to allow any spare time studying."

Mr. Peeples, who was 70 last December, has been a wage earner ever since he served as a page boy in the Georgia Senate at the age of 11. Born in Griffin, Ga., his family moved to Atlanta when he was a child. His first railroad job was with the old Richmond & Danville, which formed the nucleus of the Southern Railway System.

He went to school with Eugene Mitchell, whose daughter, Margaret, has achieved prominence by writing "Gone With the Wind." That is one of the few novels by contemporary authors that Mr. Peeples enjoyed. He is a "classics" reader—Shakespeare, Hugo, Dickens, et al.

Twenty-five years ago come July, he was shifted from Atlanta to Washington. He and his wife have lived at 1831 Belmont road all that time. They recently returned from a trip to New Jersey to christen their first grandchild.

"If I see the laddie often enough, playing with him will keep me young if nothing else will," mused grandpa.

He is a little bit regretful that he didn't prepare himself for retirement with a hobby but, for the time being at least, he is content to go daily to his "office." For the first time in his life, he has all the time he wants to keep abreast of the news and make up on the book reading he has been missing.

First thing you know he will pick up Blackstone again and become so absorbed in torts that he'll be enrolling in law school.

"I may be 70 gross," he laughed, "but I'm only 20 net."

County Police Cross D. C. Line in 75-M. P. H. Chase

Montgomery County police yesterday were the first to take advantage of an agreement between Washington, Maryland and Virginia authorities to permit pursuit of crime suspects across the District line.

At 75 and 80 miles an hour Policemen Joseph W. Ward and Wilson Payne chased two colored men in an automobile from Wisconsin avenue near Bradley lane to Nineteenth and K streets northwest, where the car was stopped as one of its occupants fled.

James Henry Beckwith, 1015 Twentieth street northwest, was held for investigation.

Funds Sought For More D.C. Relief Aides

$30,000 to Be Asked Of Congress for Doubling of Welfare Division Personnel

Member organizations of the Washington Council of Social Agencies sought yesterday to double the staff of the public assistance division of the Board of Public Welfare, which has struggled with the local relief problem for a long time with inadequate personnel.

Plans were under way to request a $30,000 deficiency appropriation by Congress for the remainder of the fiscal year to double the division's workers.

A majority of the nine family welfare agencies represented on the council approved the move yesterday. A committee will be formed to present the request to the District Commissioners.

Stressed By Lewis

The fact that the Public Assistance Division's staff is entirely inadequate was stressed by Burdette G. Lewis, District relief investigator, in his report on local relief.

The last council agency to indorse the request was the board of directors of the Bureau of Rehabilitation at a luncheon yesterday at the Young Women's Christian Association transient residence, 614 E street northwest.

Miss Anne Halliday, secretary of the council's family welfare division, explained that, if a deficiency appropriation could be obtained, it would be necessary to follow it up with an enlarged appropriation for the Public Assistance Division

Each Handle 190 Cases

Due to the inadequate staff, division case workers have to handle more than 190 relief cases each.

The board of directors of the Bureau of Rehabilitation voted yesterday to ask Congress to reconsider its action in cutting the deficiency appropriation for the Works Progress Administration from $875,000,000 to $725,000,000. The full amount should be appropriated, it contended, as a means of deterring crime

Dr. James Allen Nolan, managing director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, suggested that if each church in Washington could undertake to handle one released prisoner a year, the severe problem due to relapses into crime by persons who had served prison terms would be substantially reduced.

Joseph Dayton, director of the bureau, said if any large amount of constructive work is done in this direction, it will have to be handled by volunteers, since taxpayers would not support adequate personnel to perform the task. Allen Pope, bureau president, presided.

PORTER'S MITE $50,000 DERBY CHOICE

50,000 Fans Expected at Santa Anita

16 Three-Year-Olds Face Barrier in Tune-up for Louisville Classic

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Feb. 21.—Sixteen 3-year-olds of various shades and class were named today to race in the fifth running of the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby tomorrow.

As officials of the Los Angeles Turf Club prepared to handle a crowd of 50,000 for the annual Washington's Birthday turf feature, the entry box yielded a field of 14 colts and 2 fillies. They were:

Porter's Mite, Impound, Sweet Nancy, Ciencia, Xalapa Clown, Yale o' Nine, all representatives of the higher strata of favoritism, and Teddy Kerry, Touch and Go, Shining One, Morning Breeze, Time Alone, Hysterical, Race Riot, Arjac, Say Judge and Bubbling Boy, which may be bracketed loosely as long shots.

Speculation was rife as to how many actually would go to the post when the bugle blows around 4:12 p. m. (Pacific standard time), but many believed the field would shrink to 10 or 12.

While Santa Anita doesn't particularly like to have its rich derby mentioned as a test trial for hopefuls in the Kentucky Derby, the outcome nevertheless may furnish an outstanding candidate for the traditional Churchill Downs fixture in May.

W. E. Boeing's Porter's Mite remained the general favorite tonight for tomorrow's mile and one furlong event. A recent loss to Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Impound failed to remove the luster of the Boeing colt's victory last year in the historic Belmont Futurity, but few would concede the Mite or any other candidate complete support.

The two filly entries, Norman Church's Sweet Nancy and the King Ranch's Ciencia, have shown ability to go the distance—something Porter's Mite, Xalapa Clown, Yale o' Nine and a couple of others of the male sex have yet to prove.

Margaret Lynn Sweepstakes On Today

Rolling Will Begin At 2 o'Clock; Over 250 Expected to Enter

The fourth annual Margaret Lynn mixed sweepstakes, largest event of its kind in this vicinity, will be held this afternoon and evening at the Arcade Alleys. The expected entry is 250 which would be a new record not only for this event but for any sweepstakes ever staged in Washington.

Because many of the men and women can not compete in the afternoon, the Arcade management requests that all who can conveniently do so, bowl in the afternoon shift so the night session won't be overcrowded.

The entry fee is $2.00, including the cost of the five games. The event is open to all men with a 106 or under average and to all women with 103 and under. It is a 2-3 handicap affair. That is, a bowler will be given 2-3 of the pins between his average and the minimum.

The afternoon rolling will begin at 2 o'clock and at night at 7 o'clock.

The Margaret Lynn Sweepstakes is held each year in honor of Mrs. Margaret Lynn, an outstanding woman bowler here for more than a dozen years. It was inaugurated at the suggestion of her friends at the R. F. C. where she is employed. Mrs. Lynn rolls with the Chevy Chase team in the Women's District League and with R. F. C. in the Federal League.

Columbia Heights League

High scorers abounded at the Arcade Alleys last night as bowlers of the Columbia Heights League enjoyed one of their most prolific nights. Joe Freschi, Arcade-Pontiac, posted a high individual set of 419, and also a high individual game of 161. Hessick Coal's 654 was high team game and Chaconas Market's 1,824 was high team set.

Among those who rolled scores that ordinarily would be enough for high scoring honored were Lorraine Gulli, only woman in the league, who turned in a 417 for Chakonas Market; Fred Watson, Hessick Coal, 404; Harry Aiken, Arcade-Pontiac, 209, and Mike Vitale, Lucky Five, 396.

Riders Beat Central, Gain Title Berth

West, Travis Pace Victors' Attack; Eastern Defeats Wilson, 34-25

By Bill Burnett.

Roosevelt High's injury plagued cage five put on one of the stiffest third-quarter drives the interhigh series has seen yesterday at Eastern, barely hanging to a single point to beat Central, 24-23, and taking one of the four berths in the championship tournament to be held this week-end.

It was the nightcap of a double-header witnessed by a near capacity gathering, Eastern's defending public school champions taking the opener from Woodrow Wilson easily, 34-25, to wind up the regular cage schedule.

Roosevelt owed its victory to the accurate basket eyes of George West and Ernie Travis, who turned in 9 and 7 points, respectively, during the game, but most of all it owed the victory to Hymie Perlo, the square-built guard who captained the team. Perlo decided, with less than 3 minutes of the game left, that a 22-21 edge wasn't enough to win, and took a chance with a pot shot from center court. It ripped the net, and his judgment was credited a few seconds later when Lou Apostolakos, Mount Pleasant sub,

George West (18), flying forward of Roosevelt High's basketball team, drops the sleeper shot in the fourth quarter that helped the Riders beat Central, 24-23, for a place in the Interhigh tourney yesterday. The game was at Eastern. Len Sokol (19) and Dick Farr (60), of the losers, looks helplessly on

The Eastern five seems to be getting the worst of it in this photo, Capt. "Soup" Hancock and Ralph Lassise being on the bottom of the pileup. Eastern won, however, 34-25, over the forces of Woodrow Wilson in the last regular game of the season. Bart Fugler (5) and Caldwell McCormick, of Wilson, are also in the scramble.

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

It may seem strange that a young man should hesitate when offered the opportunity to go South to a training camp with a big league baseball club. It might seem even stranger if he had dreamed all his life of becoming a major leaguer and grown up into a promising player. But Eddie Johnson is torn between the boyhood ambition to follow in his father's footsteps and loyalty to his alma mater.

VIDMER

Nor is it difficult to understand his dilemma when you know his story, for Eddie isn't just an athlete going through college on his ability. He is a figure on the campus and the university is in his heart. But his story, as I know it, starts farther back.

It starts 16 years ago in Tampa, Fla., where the Washington Senators were in training and Walter Johnson was a nation's hero, one of the greatest pitchers in the game and one of the most respected athletes in the world. Quietly, modestly he went about the business of getting into shape for another campaign while cameras clicked about him and roving reporters asked him questions he had been asked dozens of times before.

And as he answered in his pleasant drawl his eyes followed two youngsters who were allowed the freedom of the park. One was Walter Johnson, jr., a fine-looking lad of 7 or 8, and the other little Eddie Johnson, a tow-headed boy of 5.

"Well, Eddie might be," the Big Train smiled, "but I don't know about Walter. He's of a different temperament. Whenever I tell the kids to clean up the back yard, Eddie pitches right in and goes to work, but Walter leans up against the fence

Pat Roark Dies After Tumble On Polo Field

Retired English Captain Succumbs To Brain Concussion

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Feb. 21.—Capt. C. T. I. (Pat) Roark, 43, internationally known Irish-born polo player and retired British army officer, died today from a brain concussion suffered in a fall in a polo match last Sunday.

Roark, former captain of Great Britain's International Cup team and for many years a 10-goal star, never regained consciousness.

Members of his family, including his wife, mother of the Roarks' 5-year-old son, and a brother, Aidan Roark, also a high goal polo player, were notified at noon the end was near.

Roark was playing with California's Midwick team against a team of English International Cup players, but both he and his brother were candidates for the British team in the big cup matches at Meadowbrook, N. Y., in June. The invading team members are here for a series of tune-up matches.

Roark was born in Ireland, where his 80-year-old father still lives at the family estate in County Wexford. He took up residence here some time ago and married the former Patsy Hostetter Smith, Pasadena heiress, last year.

Marshal Wells, Yale Line Coach, Resigns

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 21 (AP).—The Yale Athletic Association announced late today that Marshal Wells, line coach on the varsity football team for four seasons, resigned due to the serious illness of his mother-in-law at Minneapolis.

Last week, the forecast release next June of Frank Kanaly, veteran varsity track coach, was announced at Yale and stirred a "civil war"

Hubbell's Zero Hour Is Near, Must Throw 'Screwballs' or Else

Giant Veteran in Hot Springs With 17 Stitches in Arm

By the Associated Press.

Hot Springs, Ark., Feb. 21.—King Carl Hubbell looked a flock of hard facts in the face today and admitted his surgery-altered left arm must resume production of those famous screwballs—or else.

That lean flipper which carried the New York Giants for many a season still bears the mark of 17 stitches put in by a surgeon last fall. Although it feels well now, Hub has no idea if it can develop the twist that produces those baffling "screws."

Not given to kidding the public, the lanky southpaw didn't dish up any instrguing fiction about working out another delivery. Instead he boiled it down to a sentence:

"That operation shouldn't affect my screwball throwing, but if it does, it's probably the end of me."

Hubbell has admitted for years that he wasn't sure how long he could keep "throwing 'em down the groove."

Just when they figured his good year in 1936 was his last, the veteran came back with his greatest season of all in 1937, setting the pace at which Manager Bill Terry and his Giant crew trotted to the pennant. The Giants were all set to repeat last year, when, on top of consistent bad luck, Hub's arm went bad, making an operation necessary.

The tall southpaw, arriving here with other Giant pitchers and catchers to start conditioning, faced his uncertain future with the same poker face he shows on the mound, win or lose. The 35-year-old veteran has signed his 1939 contract, contingent on his pitching performance.

"I guess I ought to have several years left," he said, "but you know you can't ever tell about that. The arm sometimes wears out before you do."

Arizmendi Won't Be Recognized

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Baby Arizmendi, Mexican lightweight, who fights former Champion Lou Ambers in Madison Square Garden Friday night, will not be recognized by the New York State Athletic Commission as the No. 1 challenger for Henry Armstrong's title even if he defeats Ambers.

The commission told Cal Working, Arizmendi's manager, today that the Mexican would not be recognized in this State because the fight with Ambers is scheduled for only 12 instead of 15 rounds, and the fighters have agreed to weigh in at 140 pounds in stead of 135, the lightweight limit. Also, Working was informed, Ambers already has challenged Armstrong and posted a forfeit.

Ring Fans Can't Say They Were Not Warned

Galento Expected to Kayo Feldman In Short Order

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 21.—When Tony Galento, mystery man of the heavyweights, trundles his beer-barrel stomach into the ring for a punch-session with Abe Feldman tomorrow night there probably won't be a man in the crowd who thinks the affair will last six rounds.

It's one time the fight faithful can't complain they weren't warned. The experts have told them Feldman hasn't a chance and the promoters themselves made less than a half-hearted effort to build him up.

Promoter George R. K. Carter, a one-time associate of Tex Rickard, has talked of a $60,000 gate but those in the know expect it to run about $25,000, with some 12,000 persons in the Municipal Stadium where the Orange Bowl football game was played. The prices range from $1 to $10.

Young Ben Brown, of Atlanta, will meet Solly Krieger, the National Boxing Association's middleweight champion.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 21.

Stanley Raymond Harris, manager of the Washington Baseball Club, settled himself in the hotel lobby upholstery and said go ahead and shoot; he'd answer to the best of his ability s'help him.

Q. Mr. Harris, your rookies today completed three weeks of training. What is your reaction to the lot of 'em?

POVICH.

A. On the whole, I would say it has been very encouraging.

Q. Be explicit, please, Mr. Harris. Name names.

A. Well, I've never seen as promising a bunch of rookies in one camp. Masterson, Baker, Ortiz, Haynes, Anderson, Jacobs, Wynn. Shall I stick to the pitchers?

Q. No, you may name others. How about the catchers and the infielders?

A. There's the kid first baseman, Mickey Vernon. I think he'll do. And Jake Early. He's a sure-shot to be one of our catchers.

Q. You haven't mentioned Jimmy Wasdell. He was supposed to be the regular first baseman.

A. That's right. Vernon may beat him out for that job. That's conceivable. But thus far our No. 1 first baseman is Wasdell. I've promised him I'd give him a full shot at it. He deserves it after being shut out for years by Joe Kuhel and Zeke Bonura.

Wasdell or Vernon

Q. Which is the better fielder? Wasdell or Vernon?

A. Excuse me from answering that. I can't tell yet. Wasdell's fielding is no drawback. He'll come up with those hard-hit balls if he has to catch 'em in his teeth. He has courage. But Vernon has the edge on reach and he looks like a fancy fielder.

Q. You haven't mentioned Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas among your pitchers.

A. They're no longer rookies in my book. I thought you were sticking to rookies?

Q. Not necessarily. You may say something about Chase and Krakauskas.

A. I'll say I'll be disappointed if they're both not big winners this season.

Q. Why?

A. Because they have everything a winning pitcher needs, I think.

Last Year's Thoughts

Q. You thought that last year, if we remember rightly. And we find that the combined record of the pair of 'em in 1938 was 16 wins and 15 losses.

A. That's right. But this is another season. A month of preliminary training will be great stuff for their control. All they needed last year was control. This year I think they have it.

Q. What do you mean when you say you're rookie pitchers are promising?

A. I mean they're showing plenty of ability. It is entirely possible that some of them will be fine pitchers. When that will come about, I can't say. Maybe this season, maybe next, but they appear to be coming around fast, and in one respect they're lucky.

Q. Why?

A. No rookie pitcher ever had a better opportunity than there is on the Washington club this year. There are at least five jobs open. We will carry at least ten pitchers, and only two of our veterans are sure of their jobs.

Q. Who are they?

A. Chase and Krakauskas. I don't class them as rookies any longer.

Q. How about Appleton, Weaver, Deshong and Kelley?

A. There's nothing sacred about them. They've got to win their jobs in competition with the rookies. We've struggled along with softball pitchers for too many years. At least most of these kids can throw hard.

Q. Who are the kids who throw hard?

A. Masterson, Ortiz, Anderson and Wynn. They're the ones who have the high hard ones.

Q. How serious are you about making Ortiz into a pitcher?

Serious About Ortiz

A. I'm plenty serious about that. What do I have to lose? And if he learns how to pitch we'll have something.

Q. Is he as fast as Feller?

A. Not yet, but——

Q. But what?

A. He's faster than any other pitcher in the league, and when he learns to get some body into his throw the difference between his speed and Feller's won't be enough to notice.

Q. How about Ortiz's curve?

A. If he can't learn to pitch a curve, I won't care especially. If he can just learn to get his fast ball over the plate and hold runners on base, he can take his curve and send it back to Cuba for all I care.

Q. Which of the kid pitchers is the likeliest to make good quickest?

A. You want me to guess? That's about what it would be—a guess.

Q. Yes.

A. Well, I'd say Masterson. For an 18-year-old boy he has more poise than the rest. He learned a lot traveling with us last year. And he has a nice high, hard one.

Q. What about this Garner, the 6-foot-7-inch fellow?

A. It always takes those gangling kids longer to develop their best style. It all depends on how fast he learns. He's another who can throw hard. He and Anderson, who I'm not overlooking.

Q. Will Estalella be a regular outfielder?

A. I think so. Maybe the wish is father to the thought. But we could use his hitting. I think he can hit big league pitching. And Gawd, how we'll need his power.

Q. How does he strike you as an outfielder?

A. Not bad, not bad. I think he can go and get 'em. And he always could throw. No reason why he shouldn't be ready this year.

Q. Will the Washington club be a better club this season?

A. It will be a more interesting club. Yes, and I'd say a better one.

Postscripts . . .

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 21.—Al Lopez, Bees' catcher who is helping Bucky Harris coach Roberto Ortiz in the art of pitching, has encouraged the Nats' manager to give Pitcher Tom Baker a thorough trial . . . Lopez was Baker's batterymate with the Brooklyn Dodgers four weeks ago and visions the big righthander as a winning pitcher with the Nats . . . Ranked No. 1 and 2 in ability to stow away food at the dining room of the Nats' rookies here are Roberto Ortiz and Walter Masterson . . . the high-rating of the latter is a bit amazing inasmuch as he is a skinny kid of only 170 pounds . . . in an interview with Joe Williams, President Will Harridge, of the American League, credits his predecessor, Ban Johnson with being the greatest single factor in the growth of professional baseball . . . Harridge, however, was not on speaking terms with Johnson during the late years of the latter's term, despite the fact he was Johnson's secretary . . . A young catcher from Brooklyn named Joe Grimes put in his appearance at the Nats' camp unsolicited today and was signed to a Charlotte contract after Manager Calvin Griffith noted his action . . . Clark Griffith is exhibiting a new card trick . . . put the 13 spades in a group in the middle of the deck, but the deck 13 times, thin or thick, and following the thirteenth cut the spades will still be together in the same order in which they were placed in the pack . . . no kidding . . . Bucky Harris has become increasingly impressed with the chances of big Arnold Anderson to stick with the Nats . . . Anderson, a huge righthander, won only 12 and lost 8 for Charlotte last year, but Harris has learned that he was troubled with a sore arm . . . he is now fit, and if he makes good with the Nats it will be a triumph for Nick Altrock, who recommended his purchase after making a trip to Sioux Falls, S. D., to scout him two years ago.

Terps Must Beat G. W. Today to Stay in D. C. Cage Race

Colonials Favored Over Md. Foe

Capacity Crowd To Witness Game; Reinhart Plans To Shuffle Defense

By Jack Munhall.

Still trembling and wobbly as an inebriate on stilts after their harrowing experience with Catholic University, Maryland's weary Terrapins crawl into Tech gym this afternoon to battle George Washington in their second major intra-city basketball game in three days.

The game, marking official resumption of athletic relations between the two schools, will begin at 2:30 o'clock, following a preliminary between their fershman teams.

One of the rare capacity crowds of the local season is almost certain to be on hand when the Terrapins continue their uphill fight to get back into the thick of the mythical District collegiate championship race. Beaten by Georgetown last month and only a 40-38 victor over C. U. Monday, Maryland must upset the Colonials or drop out and leave the title to be decided by the G. U.-G. W. game March 8.

The Colonials, well-rested after their recent gruelling road trip and confident in the knowledge of their ability to click on the Tech floor, will rule a 3-2 favorite to beat the tired Terps and displace them as runner-up to Georgetown in the race.

The team standings and records of the three-cornered chase shown below reveal George Washington to be stronger offensively and considerably weaker defensively than Maryland.

Georgetown	11	6	640	584
Maryland	12	7	765	690
Geo. Washington..	10	7	780	733

However, these figures are not to be taken too literally, for the caliber of opposition met by George Washington has been unquestionably higher than Maryland's and therein lies the reason for the lean toward the Colonials.

This season the Colonials who make it a habit of finding the cords with disconcerting regularity from the floor are Capt. Bob Faris, high-average holder and runner-up in the District individual scoring race, and George Garber, who also is well up among the point getters. It is on the shooting of Garber and Faris that George Washington depends to split Maryland's 2-3 defense, which places the forwards, usually Ed Johnson and Adam Bengoechea, out front and the other three in the middle and in two corners

Win Soccer Crown In Playground League; Taft Team Is Victor

In District Playground Department junior soccer competition yesterday, Park View defeated Rosedale, 6 to 2, and Taft-Burroughs beat Hoover, 2 to 0.

Park View's victory gave it the championship of section 1, although several games have yet to be played, and it now awaits the winner of section 2, headed at present by Taft-Burroughs.

A feature of the Park View game was the large number of penalty kicks awarded, Ehrlick converting three of them.

D.C. High Scorers Vie for Lead in G. W.-Terp Game

One of the closest and most exciting individual point scoring races the District has ever watched will be continued at Tech gym this afternoon when George Washington's captain and outstanding player, Bob Faris, comes to grips for the first time with Maryland's sophomore sensation, George DeWitt.

After weeks of exchanging the lead to the exclusion of all rivals, DeWitt and Faris now are practically even in their two-man race, DeWitt holding the higher total, 213 to 205, and Faris the better average, 12.81 to 11.21. DeWitt has played in 19, or 3 more games than has Faris.

Even DeWitt's wild 22-point exhibition against Catholic University Monday night failed to raise his average over that of Faris, who is being compared with the greatest players ever produced at George Washington. It did, however, move him ahead in total and raise hope in his supporters that he is at the peak of form now.

Though both are exceptional scorers, in appearance and action DeWitt and Faris are the utter antithesis. Faris, trimly-built has perfect co-ordination and one of the most effortless shooting motions collegiate observers remember. Most of his points are made on shots from the floor, especially from the side-court where he drops in with amazing accuracy those difficult shots where the backboard is of no help.

On the other hand the tall, awkward-appearing DeWitt, who is only beginning to mature, looks anything but the fleet-footed dribbler and consistent star that he is. Six-foot 2-inches tall and very thin, the gaunt sophomore seems all arms and legs, yet he gets around easily and is as capable on defense as on offense.

Chambers Beat Little Tavern

Forced to play with only four men in the final 3½ minutes, Little Tavern last night lost a furiously fought Heurich Amateur Basketball League game to W. W. Chambers Co. in Heurich gymnasium, 31 to 26.

Little Tavern was leading, 26 to 32, when Wicklein was ejected on personal fouls. Wicklein had substituted for Katz who had been removed on personal previously.

St. Martin's forfeited to Delaware & Hutchinson.

Jack Butterworth, former George Washington University star, was held scoreless, but teammate Dave Osbourne accounted for 7 points as Dapper Dan defeated Hot Shoppes, 41-31.

Parochial School Tourney on Today

The fifth annual St. John's Parochial School basketball tournaments begins today at St. John's gym, with St. Stephen the pretourney favorite to take the title. St. Joseph is the defending champion, but the stellar play of St. Stephen throughout the season has installed it in the favored berth.

Other teams to compete will be St. Matthew, St. Patrick, Sacred Heart, St. Gabriel, Holy Comforter, Holy Name, St. Aloysius, St. Mary's, St. James, Holy Trinity, Blessed Sacrament, St. Martin, Immaculate Conception and the home team, St. John's.

Louisiana Tech Columbus' Foe In Ring Tonight

Explorers Hope to End Season Undefeated; Visitors Are Strong

Columbus University's undefeated ring team writes the final chapter to another successful campaign tonight at Turner's Arena, engaging Louisiana Tech in the home team's second annual "homecoming" match. The first bout is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

Little is known of the visitors, who arrived here last night in time for a workout at the Knights of Columbus gym, but if they rate on par with the Explorers' previous opponents it will be another corking good scrap. Columbus, however, is rated a 2-1 favorite on a basis of results already in. Thus far Jim McNamara's warriors have mowed down DeSales College, Kentucky and Tennessee, rolling up 19 points to 5 for their opponents.

Tonight's festivities will include the presentation from the ring of Columbus alumni who have fought for their alma mater since the sport was first introduced at the school in 1931. Gus Mirman, Leon Shub, Duke McKinney, Herbie Ginsberg, Harry Allen, Bib Grimm, George Cox, Morris Wolfe and Mike Tardugno are on the list of old grads to be introduced.

Szabo Added to Arena Mat Card

Sandor Szabo, the handsome Hungarian, last night was added to Joe Turner's wrestling program Thursday at the Arena. Nanjo Singh, a Hindu, will be Szabo's opponent in a 30-minute match.

Szabo has been plying his trade on the West Coast the past couple of years, but is returning East preparatory to staking a claim for the title currently reposing in Jim Londos' safe. In Singh he meets one of the toughest boys on the circuit. The dusky chap was banned by Turner several months ago after an unusually rough session at the Arena.

Turner also has Ed Newman and Bibber McCoy in a 45-minute semi-final signed and ready for delivery. The main bout involves Tommy O'Toole and George Pencheff.

Ten Quints See Action In Govt. 'Y' Loop

There will be no holiday tonight for teams in the Government-Y. M. C. A. Basketball League, with all ten quints slated for action on the two Central "Y" floors.

Patent Office and Public Health Service will meet in the curtain raiser at 7:10 o'clock. Bureau of Standards will face Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and Social Security Board will meet National Archives at 8:20. The State Department-Library of Congress and G. A. O.-Farm Credit Administration tilts complete the card at 9:30.

D. C. Cagers Play Boyce High Five

The Rens and Cards, junior and senior basketball teams of the Boys Club of Washington, meet the freshman and varsity teams of Boyce High School, Boyce Va., today on the out-of-town court.

Mario Gregorio, former Central High and Georgetown athlete, will be in charge of the two teams making the trip. He will be assisted by Joe Aronoff. Twenty-six basketball players will make the trip.

Riders Beat Central, Gain Title Berth

Riders Rally to Win 24-23; Eastern Defeats Wilson

High

rammed a circus shot in the net

Because it lost, Central will be forced to meet Tech Thursday afternoon at Eastern High, the winner taking that much-bruited-about fourth place in the final standings. The game was originally slated for today, but circumstances made it necessary to card it for Thursday.

Hero of the Central's unsuccessful attempt to get in the title tourney without meeting McKinley was Apostolakos, and at the same time he was the goat. During the last quarter, when everybody else's shots were rimming the basket, Lou accounted for 6 points. On the last play of the game, however, he was allowed a charity throw on West's pushing, and missed the chance to knot the count.

At half time, Central held a 11-6 lead that seemed to clinch the game. After one minute of the third period, it had stretched its advantage to 15-8, but the fireworks began at that point. Roosevelt seemed to forget about the absence of Capt. Billy Robertson, who was on the bench with a sprained ankle, and started a wild scoring spree, lasting until it was ahead 19-15 as the whistle blew ending the period.

Central suffered in the dying moments from the loss of Archie Panago, veteran who was ousted in the third quarter on peronal fouls. Dick Farr turned in the best point record for the loser, six.

and tells the others how to do it. I guess he takes after his grandfather," added the man who married a Senator's daughter.

That was long ago and far away, but it seems that the great pitcher was right about Eddie. He did turn out to be a baseball player.

The years passed and the tow-headed kid grew older. Four years ago he entered the University of Maryland and when spring came around he went out for the baseball team. Of course everyone knew he was Walter Johnson's son and expected him to be a pitcher, but Eddie liked to hit, and there was another reason why he didn't want to become a pitcher. When the coach suggested that he try it, he shook his head.

"No," he said. "I want to make good on my own. If I were a pitcher everyone would be comparing me with dad, and expecting too much of me."

So Eddie became a second baseman. In his sophomore year he hit .380. Last year he hit .350 and the big league scouts began to take notice. Here, they discovered, was not a young ball player trading on his father's famous name, but a young ball player who showed major league promise on his own. They began to make him offers to leave college and turn professional.

Holds Other Honors

But Eddie Johnson had become something more than a good athlete. He had achieved other distinctions closely connected with his life at the university. His brothers in Phi Delta Theta had elected him president of the fraternity. The undergraduate body of 3,000 had elected him president of the student governing council, the highest distinction an undergraduate could receive.

Naturally the University of Maryland meant a great deal to him. He wanted to graduate with his class, to play for the basketball and baseball teams. It meant so much to him that he refused to accept a scholarship, but paid his way.

This, his senior year, was to be the crowning year of his successful college career. But pressure is being brought to bear on him to desert it all. A major league team is urging him to quit college and go South next month.

"If you don't go this spring you will lose a whole year in baseball," the scout urges. "This spring we can place you with one of the Class A teams in our farm system. If you wait until June to report, there may not be any openings on the Class A clubs and you'll have to go to a Class B organization. After all, baseball is going to be your career, what does college mean with an opportunity to get started like this? You always can go back and get your degree when the baseball season is over."

Young Responsibilities

If Eddie Johnson didn't mean so much to Maryland and Maryland hadn't come to mean so much to him, it might not be such a difficult decision for him to make. If he were just another athlete on the campus, he might not hesitate to chuck it all and turn professional.

Bethesda Beats Landon

Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School's basketball team proved too strong for the forces of Landon Prep in the home gym yesterday and defeated the District invaders, 29-12, as Forward Johnny Kinsman scored 12 points to lead the attack.

With Kinsman and Shumate and Whelan setting the pace, the Maryland team built up a 16--6 half-time advantage and coasted to victory, employing almost the entire squad.

PWA Basketeers Win Heated Game From Indians, 36-28

The Indian basketball team, winner of first half play in the Interior Department Basketball League, was rudely upset by its bitterest rival last night in the Interior gym, PWA taking a close 36-28 decision with power-laden rally in the waning minutes.

A rousing preliminary to the feature was furnished by NPS and the U. S. Housing team, NPS winning, 24-14, after a stiff battle in the opening minutes. Frye, usually accountable for 10 or 12 points for Housing, was bottled by the winners and scored only 2 points.

Friends Tops St. Andrew's In Fast Game

Wins 29-28 Victory on Jonees' Foul Shot in Last 20 Seconds of Game

Corson Jones' foul shot in the last 20 seconds of play yesterday gave Friends' School its first victory of the season, a thrilling 29-28 triumph over St. Andrew's School, of Middletown, Del., in the home gymnasium.

Jones' point, which snapped the local team's losing streak at five games, nullified a game comeback which the losers had waged to the score at 28-28 in the last minute of play after trailing 10-2 at the end of the first quarter and 23-17 at the half.

Silent Witness, Outsider, Beats Five Flamingo Eligibles

Don Meade Gives Colt Perfect Ride

Mrs. Payne Whitney's Day Off Finishes Length and Half Back In Hialeah Feature

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 21.—C. H. (Tobe) Trotter's Silent Witness, only horse in the six horse field not eligible for the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes, scored a handy victory in the Marianna Purse here today. Don Meade gave the colt a perfect ride and guided the $7.90 for $2 second choice over the wire with a length and a half to spare. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Day Off was second by six lengths, with Starmount Stable's Shambles third.

J. N. Camden's filly Royal Pam, which recently won the seven-furlong Bahamas Handicap in front of the highly regarded Technician and thus became one of the choices for the Flamingo, found the added distance beyond her ability and finished a shocking last in the role of an even money favorite.

Gov. Fred P. Cone was among the 12,000 fans that witnessed the mile and a furlong test. It was the first visit here this year for Florida's chief executive.

Silent Witness, in his last race, finished a fast closing second to Technician after winning two turf course events, one of them a $2,500 claiming affair. His last race pleased Owner Trotter so much that he decided to name the colt for the Kentucky Derby.

Silent Witness covered the Flamingo distance today in 1:50 1-5 under 112 pounds.

Bow and Arrow, ridden by Meade, and Would Dare wound up in a dead heat in the last race, with Bold General only a nose behind in the third place. Bow and Arrow, the favorite, paid $3.10, $3.50 and $2.70 across the board, while Would Dare returned $5.80, $5.30 and $3.90.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PRESENT TIME, $11.80, $9.20, $6.10; MADAM CAPET, $15.00, $7.50; MARION W., $3.50.

PRESENT TIME away forwardly, went prominently throughout and, closing gamely in the final drive, outlasted MADAM CAPET. The latter broke alertly, drew clear while drifting out in the opening furlong and continued courageously when challenged, but was unable to withstand the winner's challenge. MARION W., vigorously urged and well up all the way, closed gamely and just lasted long enough to outlast BRACING in the stretch drive. BRACING, bumped off stride at the start, moved up rapidly when obtaining racing room and finished strongest of all.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:34½. Winner, H. J. Bundscho's b. or br. g. (7), by Haste—Stephanie. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:46 3-5, 1:11 3-5, 1:24 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GREAT HASTE, $5.70, $3.60, $3.30; LADFIELD, $5.90, $4.70; CHANCER, $9.30.

GREAT HASTE, on the inside and in tight quarters in the early running, was eased back and taken around the leader entering the stretch, assumed command rapidly and was easily the best. LADFIELD, going well up while racing wide all the way, finished gamely to punishment and wore CHANCER down in the last strides. CHANCER began fast, displayed good speed and repeatedly bothered the winner, but faltered through the stretch, yet held the others safe. GURKHA, well handled, had no excuses. TEXAS ROSE bled. He fell while being pulled up.

Daily Double, Present Time and Great Haste, Paid $65.80.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (turf course); purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:04. Off 3:07½. Winner, Mrs. E. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLUE FANG, $35.00, $13.00, $9.00; SURE MISS, $5.60, $4.40; BIG BULLY, $24.80.

BLUE FANG, going in his best form, followed the pace well up under light restraint while saving ground, slipped through in the final sixteenth mile and closing determinedly to punishment, got up in the last strides. SURE MISS, away forwardly, but compelled to race wide rounding the first turn, took command entering the backstretch and made a game effort when the final test came, but could not stave off the winner's bid. BIG BULLY, on the outside and a keen factor throughout, continued stoutly in the final furlong to punishment. NICHOLAS S., always prominent, was unable to better his position in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. Grade C. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:37. Off 3:38. Winner, Brookfield Stable's br. g. (5), by Brooms—Dark Phantom. Trained by H. L. Fontaine. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 2-5, 0:45 3-5, 1:10 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DRUDGERY, $5.50, $3.60, $2.80; GAY BALKO, $6.10, $4.50; KNIGHT'S HAVEN, $4.00.

DRUDGERY, away alertly, set a swift pace while saving the most ground, closed gamely when placed to punishment in the final furlong and got up in the last few strides. GAY BALKO, a keen contender all the way, assumed a short lead on the stretch run, held on courageously when the real test came, but Balaski clearly outrode Charlton. KNIGHT'S HAVEN broke well, but was outrun in the first half mile, gained steadily on the outside thereafter and was going fastest of all at the finish. GAYSET, on the outside and in close attendance of the leaders the entire trip, faltered slightly in the stretch run.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,100; allowances. The Lake Wales. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:04. Off 4:07. Winner, B. F. Whitaker's ch. c. (4), by Omar Khayyam—Rippling Crimp. Trained by J. Howard. Value to winner, $775; second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:22 3-5, 0:46, 1:10 4-5, 1:17 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CREPE, $5.80, $3.40, $2.50; BENJAM, $3.60, $2.60; SUN INPLAY, $2.50.

CREPE took command under extreme pressure in the run down the backstretch, continued with determination under intermittent punishment when the final issue came and held his opposition safe at the finish. BENJAM, going forwardly on the outside all the way, finished courageously and outlasted SUN INPLAY in the final drive. SUN INPLAY, on the inside and in close quarters until straightened into the stretch, held on gamely, but could not get up. CO-SPORT, prominent all the way, faltered in the stretch run.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; allowances. The Marianna. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:36. Off 4:40. Winner, C. H. Trotter's b. c. (3), by Busy American—Edith Alice. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:12, 1:37 2-5, 1:50 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SILENT WITNESS, $7.90, $3.90, $3.30; DAY OFF, $5.60, $4.20; SHAMBLES, $7.00.

SILENT WITNESS, kept in near pursuit of the leader in the early stages, took command with a rush when straightened into the stretch to win under mild urging. DAY OFF went forwardly under slight restraint until entering the stretch, where he responded gamely when called upon, but could not overtake the winner. SHAMBLES, slow to find his stride, improved his position in the last quarter mile under punishment and wore SIRASIA down in the closing strides. SIRASIA, rated off the pace, made a bold bid on the stretch turn, but faltered in the final drive. ROYAL PAM set a fast pace for seven furlongs, but folded up suddenly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:10. Off 5:14½. Winner, Darby Dan Farm's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARBY DU, $9.40, $5.20, $4.10; SILSWEEP, $23.20, $13.60; J. WARE, $7.40.

DARBY DU, quickest to begin, was eased off the pace rounding the first turn, saved ground throughout and responded gamely when called upon to shake off SILSWEEP in the final furlong. SILSWEEP, a prominent contender throughout, made a game effort entering the stretch, but faltered in the stretch drive. J. WARE, steadied back of the leaders early, finished gamely under punishment and disposed of the others.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:45. Off 5:45½. Winners, A. Sprow's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOW AND ARROW (dead heat), $3.10, $3.50, $2.70; WOULD DARE (dead heat), $5.80, $5.30, $3.90; BOLD GENERAL, $4.30.

BOW AND ARROW, pocketed on the inside in the first six furlongs, came between the leaders at the furlong pole, then on the inside through the stretch and took a short lead, but failed to withstand WOULD DARE'S bid. The latter, far back in the first half mile, gained rapidly the remainder of the trip and would have won clearly in another stride. BOLD GENERAL went into contention with a rush leaving the backstretch, took a brief lead through the stretch, but hung in the final drive. GRAND MARIE, a keen contender, kept BOW AND ARROW in close quarters most of the trip, saved ground into the stretch and held on gamely in the final drive.

Pounding Around Turn Into Stretch at Hialeah

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Nerves of the fans were tense, and their cries of encouragement loud as this closely bunched field rounded the last turn and headed into the homestretch in the third race yesterday at Hialeah. The race was run on the infield. The winner was—if you're guessing—Blue Fang (second from right), which rewarded its backers with a $35 mutuel. Sure Miss (extreme right) ran second and Big Bully (third from right) was third. They all seemed to have a chance when this picture was snapped

C. & O. Election Sastisfactory to Guaranty Trust

Board Is Enlarged to 12 Over Protest of Young and Alleghany

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Feb. 12.—Directors of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway enlarged their board to 12 directors today over the protest of Alleghany Corporation, nominally the top holding company of the railroad empire built up by the late Van Sweringen brothers.

Elected to the board were Homer L. Ferguson, of Newport News, Va., president of the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., and Ralph C. Gifford, president of the First National Bank of Louisville, Ky. One of the men is a replacement for John C. Myers, of Ashland, Ohio, who resigned recently as a director, and the other is an addition to the board, which previously had consisted of 11 directors.

Bank Has Large Say

Both Ferguson and Gifford, an informed source said, were satisfactory to Chairman Herbert C. Fitzpatrick and President George D. Brooke of C. & O., and to Guaranty Trust Co., of New York. The bank has a considerable if not controlling voice in the railroad due to a technical default of Alleghany Corporation bonds.

Robert R. Young, New York broker, who, with associates, purchased in 1937 what appeared to be control of the C. & O. and associated railroads, has been vying with Guaranty for the last year for working control. Under a compromise last spring three representatives of Guaranty were placed on the board.

After today's meeting of directors, which lasted more than three hours, Young retired to his office and associates said he was "seeing no one."

At the close of an Alleghany Corporation directors' meeting Monday, Young said he expected an effort to "throw me out" of today's meeting. A director of C. & O., as well as chairman of Alleghany Corporation, Young said he might have to seek recourse in court.

Daily Oil Output Up 39,776 Barrels

Tulsa, Feb. 21 (AP).—An increase of 39,776 barrels daily, bringing the Nation's production of crude oil to 3,320,961 barrels daily during the week ended February 18, was reported today by the Oil and Gas Journal.

An increase of 11,275 barrels daily was registered in Oklahoma, bringing that State's average to 444,475. East Texas declined 353 to 372,397 and the State of Texas was up 3,194 to 1,304,289. Louisiana declined 600 barrels daily to 264,630. California increased 16,700 to 634,200 and Kansas was up 7,825 to 152,425.

Old Crop Cotton Futures Decline; New Crops Higher

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Old crop contracts continued to weaken while distant deliveries were marked up modestly in cotton trading today. Final prices were 2 points up to off as much.

Today's price currents, according to many brokers, showed signs of continuing until Washington evolves a 1939 crop legislation program capable of managing present huge Government supplies of the staple.

The feature of the trade was switching of March into new crop positions. March closed at a 106-point premium over October and March-December worked earlier at 103 and 110 points.

Thursday will be first notice day on March options and trade opinion held that issuance of notices will not be very heavy as the certificated stock is only a little over 36,000 bales. Open interest in March was thought to have been reduced today to about 230 bales.

Cottonseed Oil

After shading lower in early dealings, cottonseed oil futures rallied close to the season's high marks later today. Trade demand and short covering for foreign account ran into profit taking on the way up and final prices were 2 points up to 1 down. Sales totaled 136 lots. March closed, 6.85; May, 7.08; July, *7.18; September, 7.27; October, *7.28. Crude oil sold at 5¾ cents in the Southeast. Texas reported a range of 5½ to 5¾. Trade reports indicted Southern mills were dissatisfied with current crude levels and were holding in in anticipation of an upturn.

Preholiday Trading Dull In Wheat Pit

Prices of Futures Vary From ⅜ Up To ¼ Lower

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 21.—Wheat prices varied from ⅜-cent gain to ¼-cent decline in a typical pre-holiday trade today and closed very little changed from yesterday.

Trading was at a standstill much of the time, with dealers apparently oblivious to routine market developments at home and abroad. Transactions involved small lots and consisted mostly of mill buying and hedging together with evening up of accounts for the holiday here tomorrow when foreign markets will be open.

Slight fractional gains early in the day, with buying credited partly to milling interests in connection with further flour business, attracted moderate selling which held the upturn in check. An unsettled close at Liverpool with quotations there unchanged to 1 cent lower, disturbed the market here.

Wheat closed ⅛ off to ¼ higher, compared with yesterday; May, 68¾@68⅞; July, 68⅞@69. Corn, unchanged to ¼ up; May, 49⅞@50; July, 51⅛@51¼. Oats, unchanged to ⅛ low. Rye, ⅛ to ¼ higher. Lard, unchanged to 2 cents higher.

American Gas to Spend $25,000,000 This Year

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—George N. Tidd, president of American Gas & Electric Co., told stockholders today the system would spend $25,000,000 on new construction in 1939, compared with $26,500,000 in 1938.

Electric output of the system, which operates in many Middle-western and Southern States, has averaged in 1939 from 15 to 20 per cent better than in the corresponding period of 1938, Tidd reported, adding that this year's output may exceed the 5,365,000,000 kilowatt record high of 1937.

Trading Continues Dull, With Narrow Price Changes, Following the Slowest February Market in Ten Years

New York, Feb. 21.—Wall Street went through the motions of security trading again today and transfers held to the same dull and lifeless pattern of the slowest February, from the point of view of stocks, in more than a decade. Bonds were firm but quiet. Guilders again declined in foreign exchange transactions. Wheat and cotton showed negligible changes.

Brokerage house comment was concentrated more than ever on an obscure foreign situation, further complicated by the Japanese air raid on British territory at Hongkong, indicating that Tokyo's moves are related to Italio-German planes. Meanwhile, Senator Vandenberg directed the attention of Americans to three ways in which President Roosevelt can keep his promise of no new and increased taxes to provide armaments. One is to continue the policy of deficit financing, a second to adopt inflation measures, and a third to reduce appropriations elsewhere.

The Senator declared he could see no prospect of the Administration letting up on spending. As business already faces an added handicap next year with the automatic 50 per cent boost in social security taxes, it is suggested that investment hesitancy is based on domestic as well as foreign factors. Conflict between large groups representing Fascist and Communist thought within the United States is also mentioned by analysts as inimical to the restoration of confidence necessary to recovery.

Price Changes Slight

The change in the general level of stocks was negligible, 100 key issues ending 0.06 point off. Active shares, however, were largely gainers although their progress was limited to fractions. Of 654 issues traded, 235 advanced and 223 declined, 196 being unchanged. One of the dollar stocks, Callahan Zinc-Lead, was the day's leader, with turnover of 9,100 shares of the 465,380-share total.

A few 1,000 to 1,500-share blocks came out at the opening when professional longs appeared to be testing out the market to see if it would rebound from Monday's break. The largest initial trade was in North American Aviation, of 1,500 shares. Glenn Martin and Curtiss-Wright opened on 1,000 shares each. Chrysler was fractionally up on a first deal of 1,400 shares. After the first hour, trading virtually stagnated but closing quotations were well above the day's lows in most instances.

Business and industrial news lacked feature. Commentators on the 2.2 per cent drop in steel production for the current week emphasized that it is usual for output in most industries to recede in a national holiday week. Various sources estimated that a further decline in mortor car production will be extended into March as stocks in dealers hands are said to have reached approximately the same level as a year ago. Preliminary estimates or carloadings were cheerful. Unfavorable signs in this direction have been a worry for several weeks. Building and construction lines continue fairly busy although a large proportion of the activity is accounted for by governmental projects. In the petroleum industry there is some apprehension concerning the rapid increase in motor fuel stocks as well as continuing softness in the price structure at scattered points.

Bonds Irregular

Listed bond trading was a dull pre-holiday affair, today, with price changes small and irregular. United States Treasury issues varied only a few thirty-seconds of a point in either direction. Best grade corporate bonds held to former levels, which are at or close to top figures, of recent years, and in some cases records for all time. Changes in the speculative groups were mostly fractional. Turnover amounted only to $4,360,000.

Secondary rail liens were quiet, with the better rated issues exceptionally dull. Some of the borderline carrier bonds were in modest demand, while the default bonds drifted downward. Alleghany Corporation bonds improved, and some of the utility holding issues also were better. Industrial convertibles were steady. In the local traction division small declines were the rule, owing to indications that unification may be delayed longer.

In the foreign dollar section the high grade issues of Australian, Canadian and Scandinavian origin were firm, indicating that buying is slowly being resumed by the European markets. The Italian and Japanese issues were uncertain. German and other European default bonds were idle, while most Latin-American issues drifted lower. Uruguayan bonds and some of the Colombia issue did well, despite the general lack of interest.

Big Board Firms' Minimum Capital Set at $25,000

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange decided today that its members will have to put up more of their own money in transacting securities business with the general public.

Effective April 1, the exchange announced, member firms will be required to have a minimum net capital of $25,000. The new rule will have little effect upon the brokerage credit structure now, exchange spokesmen said, because Wall Street business is unusually quiet and most firms have a large excess of capital over the new requirement.

If and when the market turns more active, however, the new rule would compel brokers to maintain about 30 per cent more capital in relation to the amount of business done than under the present flexible rule.

Today's action was said by the exchange to be in line with the 15-point program adopted last October after joint study by exchange officials and the Securities and Exchange Commission, designed "to provide additional protection to the public in its dealings with member firms."

Domestic Exchanges Closed for Holiday

New York, Feb. 21 (AP).—Washington's Birthday will be observed by leading financial and commodity markets throughout the country tomorrow. The New York Stock Exchange and outside security exchanges, local commodities, wheat futures in Chicago and other grain centers will suspend trading.

However, principal livestock markets will operate as will financial markets in Canada and abroad.

Eugene Leggett Is Eulogized At Burial Rites

Sir Willmott Lewis, House Chaplain Laud Former Correspondent

Two hundred persons—Government officials and newspapermen—yesterday gave a final tribute to Eugene Sheldon (Red) Leggett in rites at Oak Hill Cemetery.

Earlier, in funeral home services, Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times, delivered a eulogy for the 36-year-old former newspaperman and executive officer of the National Emergency Council, who died of pneumonia at Emergency Hospital last Sunday. Sir Willmott said:

"The world knows what a man does, but only his friends know what he is . . . 'Red' Leggett had a host of friends, which could mean only one thing, for a man cannot have the hearts of others without giving his own . . ."

At Oak Hill, the Navy Band played Chopin's "Funeral March" and "The Stars and Stripes Forever."

The Rev. James F. Montgomery, House chaplain, speaking at a grave, lauded the former correspondent for the Detroit Free Press as a "Christian gentleman, kindly, democratic in his ways, and many of whose good deeds were known only to the Creator."

Pallbearers were Lieut. Charles Benter, William Donaldson, Warren Francis, Charles P. Shaffer, Lee Poe Hart, Martin Logan, Frank Walker, Robert Berger.

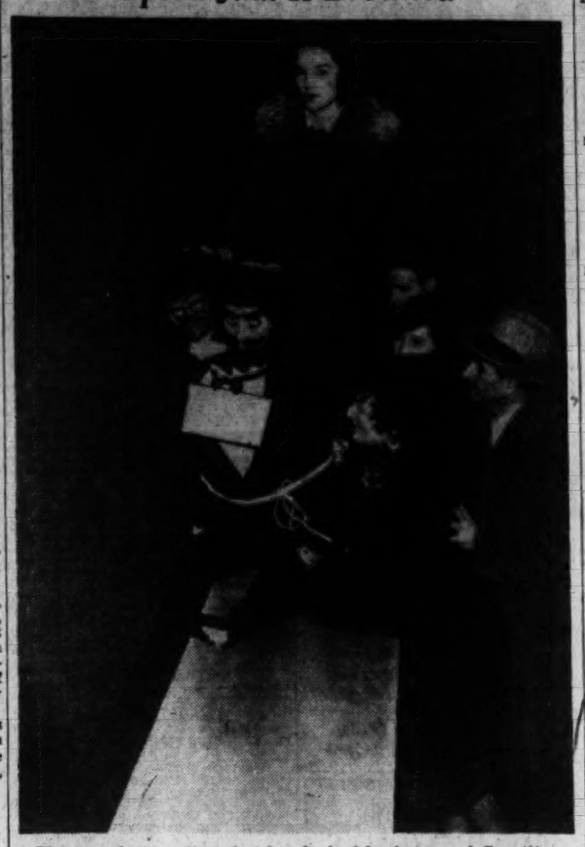
Opera Jinx Is Drowned



The grand opera jinx that has lurked backstage of Constitution Hall was thrown into the Potomac River at the Memorial Bridge late yesterday by singers of the Remington-Webster Grand Opera Guild. About to toss the two-headed demon into the brink are Ruth Thompson, Robert Northrop, Dorothy Seke, William Webster and Dorothy Remington. The troop has selected Immaculate Conception Hall, Eighth and N streets northwest, for their presentation Tuesday February 28.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Today's hand offers a test in defensive play. It was sent by a contributor who laments the proclivity of certain modern bidders to keep the bidding so low that the defense can put in a weak lead-directing bid. The writer favors the old hop, skip and jump method of reaching three no trump, which keeps the adversaries out of the auction and in the dark.

However, contemptuous as our contributor is of this modern bidding he is even more disdainful of modern play, and it is with this phase of the hand that we are concerned.

How would you manage the defense with the opening lead of the eight of spades? Against any other opening, declarer has no trouble in making his contract. Would you choose the new way of playing the spades—that is, ducking the first trick, to allow partner a chance to lead the suit again in the event he has an entry? Or would you play the old-fashioned way, going right up with the spade queen and continuing the suit? And why? Don't forget that West must also co-operate in the defense for it to be successful.

If East elects to follow the new way of playing his spades, ducking at the first trick, declarer will make his contract through an end play. He will take the first trick with the spade jack and lead a club to the queen. East will win with the ace, returning the spade queen, and South's ace will take. Declarer will enter dummy with a club and play the queen of hearts. East must duck to prevent the fourth heart in dummy from becoming established. The queen holds and now declarer takes the ace and king of diamonds, the last club, and end plays East with a spade. After cashing his spade tricks, East will have to give two heart tricks to declarer.

Declarer lets the spade queen hold, and East continues with a low spade, South winning with the jack. The king of clubs is led; East takes with the ace and clears the spades. Declarer enters dummy with a club honor and plays the queen of hearts. East ducks, South plays small and West takes a look at the seven, sees it is a mighty big card—only the ace, king and eight are missing—and plays the nine under the queen. Declarer leads the jack of hearts, this time East covers, South wins with the ace, but West lets go of the ten, and East's eight is high. The heart trick, plus three spades, and the ace of clubs accomplishes declarer's downfall.

Disabled Va. Veterans Name Convention City

Roanoke, Va., Feb. 21 (AP).—The 139 convention city of Virginia's disabled American Veterans of the World War is to be selected at a meeting of the State executive committee Sunday at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria, Frank C. Hickman, past department commander, said today.

Last year the convention was held here. C. E. Reynolds is to represent Roanoke at the meeting.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

BEFORE long, Alexander Woollcott is coming to Washington to talk informally with a Federal workers group and a small gathering of others interested in public affairs. Woollcott was a student at Hamilton College where Dr. Frederick Morgan Davenport made the campus public-affairs-conscious. 'Twill be a very private and informal talk.

PETTY czarism in Federal bureaus, alleged last year by Senator Ellender, of Louisiana, will be brought to the three Civil Service Commissioners and the board of appeals and review within the commission, at a closed-door session beginning at 2 p. m. Friday in the office of William C. Hull, executive assistant to the commissioners.

Senator Ellender's committee of five is expected then to lay its plans for further investigations before the commission. Ellender, it is recalled, charged that rank favoritism in promotions and general handling of personnel is wide-spread in the bureaus—that often a pretty face is considered above merit. This column has a notion that the commission will seek on Friday to dissuade Senator Ellender from pressing his inquiries, on the grounds that some ultra-high-powered reshapings of the Federal personnel practices are now in making. But the Senator's office makes known that the committee is primed to proceed. Before it's over, certain gentlemen may be explaining why they preferred those blondes.

PROGRESS of the bill to create a permanent United States travel bureau has been smooth, of late, and its passage soon is predicted. Here is a curious state of affairs—that of a new governmental bureau being born with no kick from any quarter. It is fathered in the Senate by the ultra-conservative Senator Bailey, who said, in part: "... I urge that this bill be passed by Congress, and sufficient funds appropriated for this agency to be established on a sound and permanent basis, and thus counteract the propaganda work carried on so extensively in the United States by the governments of other countries." Also, at a meeting to push the bureau, the United States Chamber of Commerce was prominently represented.

MORE than 60 Federal employes will take to the fresh air of the high Catoctins near Thurmont, Md., today in one of the first general employe outings at the Recreational and Demonstration Area camp. A bus will leave the south side of the Treasury Building this morning at 7:30 o'clock . . . Harry Ritner asks the note that he is no longer associated with the Washington Federal Bulletin, which from time to time has appeared in pamphlet form detailing Federal personnel matters . . . Assistant Attorney General Thurman Wesley Arnold will talk on "The Problem of the Philosophies of Government" Friday night at the College of William and Mary. Arnold advises that his remarks will be off the record, but that "the talk will embody the principles expressed in his writings." This is something to puzzle on. If what he has to say Friday has been expressed in public writings why will it now be off the record? The Government becomes more involved and incredible every day.

NOTE to the State Department: You have enough troubles over there, what with expropriated oil wells and European fumings, but the truth is, a gentleman came to us yesterday, blue in the face at what he called your lack of co-operation. It seems that he wrote you for a copy of some obscure treaty and you referred him to the public library or else to some publication which he claims costs $5 a throw. He is threatening to see the White House about it. Well . . .

NOTES: The Personnel Department of the HOLC has gotten out a 27-page general informat pamphlet dealing with Federal annual and sick leave. It explains the laws, regulations and points out the Comptroller General decisions; it answers common inquiries, has a chart for the computation of leave accruals, flow charts and sample forms used. It is, in brief, a nifty . . . The A. F. G. E. switches its annual convention of next summer from New York City to Atlantic City. The World's Fair congestion caused the change.

Bob Burns Says—

Take your time, boys an' girls—this is a hard one. I'm gonna give you a little lesson in history today. Who was the man who said: "Poppa, I cannot tell a lie. I did it with my little hatchet!" Yep—you're right—little Georgie! There was a boy who started out by tellin' the truth an' became President of this country! Think of it, boys an' girls, where the truth is apt to lead you! George Washington is the only President, so far as I kin discover, who's supposed never to have told a lie. From the minute politics commenced to git goin', the rest of 'em had to begin makin' promises they couldn't keep, and that kinda put a strain on what we call the "simon pure specie of out-an'-out truth." Now the world's got so complex, if a President can come anywhere near what he's promised, we give him credit for good intentions an' let it go at that.

But, George, he jes' looked his father in the eye, after he chopped down that cherry tree, an' owned up that he'd done it. His father, though, he wasn't near so truthful. He told a whopper when he laid George across his knee an' said to him as he was warmin' his breeches: "Son, this is a-hurtin' me more'n it is you!"

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The New Home

Whoe'er by difficulties tried
Attains success was cause for pride.
—Old Mother Nature.

Mrs. Hooty the Horned Owl was filled with pride. It was honest pride. She felt that she had a right to be proud. So she had. She had a new nest. Yes, sir, she had a new nest, and when I say new I mean new in the full meaning of that word. You see ordinarily Hooty and Mrs. Hooty do not have a new nest when the time for housekeeping comes around. The nest may be new to them, but it is second hand. It really is an old nest. These big Owls are content to use nests that others have built, merely fixing them up a little to meet their own needs.

To begin with they set up housekeeping in almost the middle of winter, and that isn't a good time to find nesting material, particularly when everything is covered with snow and ice. It is much easier, and they think a great deal more sensible, just to take possession of a nest already built, an old nest of Redtail the Hawk or even one of Blacky the Crow. But they can build a nest if they have to.

This year they had had to. A hurricane in the fall had broken off or blown down every tree in which there was a suitable nest there in the Green Forest. Hooty had been for leaving the Green Forest for the Big Mountain but Mrs. Hooty wouldn't listen to this. She would stay there even if they had to build a nest and this is just what they did have to do.

Now for people with so little experience in nest building they built a very good nest. Mrs. Hooty did most of the building but Hooty did help some by fetching sticks. You see it was built mostly of sticks. When it was about finished Mrs. Hooty began to think of a lining for it.

"It doesn't need a lining. We have used nests without linings before this," asserted Hooty.

Mrs. Hooty admitted this, for it was true. More than once they had had an old nest that was unlined and had not bothered to line it. "But," added she, "you know as well as I do that the best nests we have had were lined, some with dead grass, some with leaves, and I remember one that had been lined with moss and there was still some when we took possession."

"Where are you going to get grass or dry leaves or moss this weather?" demanded Hooty.

Mrs. Hooty made no reply. Now that the nest was practically completed Hooty gave it little attention. Now that he was no longer expected to bring sticks for it he was quite satisfied with it as it was. A few days later he took it into his head to have a look at it while Mrs. Hooty was off hunting. When he looked into it he blinked. I suspect he would have rubbed his eyes could he have done such a thing. Not only was that nest lined, but it was beautifully lined. It was lined with soft yellowish brown downy feathers.

While he was still staring at them Mrs. Hooty returned. He looked at her sharply. It was as he had expected. Her breast had a ragged appearance. He knew then for certain where the lining of that nest had come from. Mrs. Hooty had pulled those feathers from her own breast just as Mrs. Quask the Duck does.

"Well?" said Mrs. Hooty in an inquiring tone.

"Well?" replied Hooty in the same tone.

"It is a good nest," said Mrs. Hooty.

Hooty nodded. "It is," he agreed. "And some folks think we can't build a nest," said Mrs. Hooty. "I wouldn't care to do it often, but I'm proud of this one."

And really Mrs. Hooty had reason to be proud.

2 Fly to Death As 8 Naval Planes Crash

Training Flight Tragedies Laid To Blinding Fog

By the Associated Press.

Pensacola, Fla., Feb. 21. — Two deaths and eight wrecked naval planes were charged today to fog which blacked out landing fields and broke up a routine, 12-ship training flight last night.

Nearly back to the naval training base here when the shroud enveloped them, three instructors, followed radio orders, drove north out of the gray blanket and landed safely in southern Alabama. One student flier in his single seater followed them to safety. A passenger flew with each of the instructors.

The other eight, without radios and apparently unable to keep in sight of the leaders, flew divergent courses until gasoline supplies failed. Then the planes plummeted to earth, two carrying their pilots to death. The others "bailed out."

The eight wrecked training planes were valued at $18,000 or more" a piece.

Lieut. G. F. Presser, of Rio de Janeiro, a Brazilian navy officer receiving instruction here, and Lieut. N. M. Ostergren, rode their planes to death. rPesser managed to bring his plane down to Corry Field here, but it crashed and burned. Ostergren fell near McDavid, Fla.

A board of inquiry headed by Lieut. Comdr. A. J. Isbell began an inquiry today.

In Washington, Secretary Swanson named Rear Admiral Frank H. Sadler, a member of the Navy's General Board, as senior member of the court of inquiry. Others in the group are Capt. Thomas Withers, stationed at New York, and Commander John D. Price, commander of the Naval Air Station at Anacostia. Lieut. Comdr. Harold L. Meadow, of the Pensacola station, was appointed recorder.

Lieut. Thomas D. Cummins (top), of Washington, D. C., jumped to safety with his parachute when fog over Pensacola prevented plane from landing. Lieut. N. M. Ostergren (lower), of Fort Peck, Mont., was burned to death when his plane crashed in the same locality because of the dense fog

Youth Indicted For Theft of 36 Drain Gratings

The disappearance of 36 brass gratings to drains in the National Capital Park system appeared solved yesterday with the indictment of James Oliver White, 21, colored, for larceny from the United States Government.

The indictment was one of 33 returned by the grand jury, which pushed its work ahead one day because District courts are closed today—Washington's Birthday.

Other indictments were:

Housebreaking and larceny—Moses Beckman, 18, colored, two counts; Charles Matthews, 18, colored; Andrew V. Taylor, 18, colored; Samuel L. Brown, 18, colored, Everett C. Jones, 19, colored, four counts; Thomas A. Washington, 21, colored. Unlawful use of automobile—Robert Shaw, 22, colored. Grand larceny—Joseph E. Roberts, 24, colored. Dragon 35 Million Years Old Is Found

The Smithsonian Institution yesterday described the most complete fossil specimen yet found of the giant glyptosaurus, a fearsome armored dragon that flourished over parts of North America 35,000,000 years ago.

The creature was no more than 3 feet long but its formidable appearance was such as probably to intimidate contemporary animals several times that size.

The newly reported fossil specimen consists of the head, neck and forepart of the body. Remains have been found in Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Montana and parts of Canada.

Mrs. Roosevelt To Christen Plane

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will christen the Yankee Clipper, 40-ton transatlantic plane, at the Anacostia (D. C.) Naval Air Station on March 3, Juan T. Trippe, Pan American Airways president, announced yesterday.

Vatican Reporter Tells of Pope's Courage in Face of Illness

Holy Father Reproved Those Who Suggested He Take a Rest

By Thomas B. Morgan

Copyright, 1939.

Years were making their assault upon the physical stamina of Pius XI but he was defiant. His powerful will tempered to match his declining bodily resistance dominated the day's work, pain or no pain. The spirit was willing. He continued the schedule of youth. He was fighting against years. He was holding his own but at terrific cost.

Finally, Cardinal Pacelli and Mgr. Pizzardo saw that the courageous thought exacting struggle consumed his diminishing strength. They asked him to permit a physician to call. He protested but eventually consented. Even then he did not name a papal physician but summoned the health officer of Vatican City, Dr. Aminta Milani.

His blood pressure was high and Dr. Milani advised that he undergo a draining. The Pope demurred but after days of persuasion he acceded. The physician recommended complete rest but he continued to work.

At the end of the summer Pius XI left Castelgandolfo and returned to the Vatican. He continued his daily program without any abatement. Many observed, however, that he walked with apparent difficulty and that he limped occasionally.

A Franciscan monk who had been received in audience remarked the lameness and, less familiar with the Pontiff's disdain for such an evident infirmity than those around him, was bold enough to suggest that the Holy Father should not use up so much of his strength in laborious exertion. This received a frown.

Cardinal Pacelli Succeeds

"Do not be so engrossed about my lameness," Pius XI admonished the monk in dry and withering tones. "God and myself take that responsibility."

This was enough to close the subject.

There were two brethren of the Fatebene order of the household who waited on the Pope's physical needs, preparing his food, making his bed and watching over his bodily well-being as much as they could. They were Fra Faustino and Fra Filippo. Fra Faustino noticed that the Pope was suffering and took great account of what now was torment for the Pope and observed that the ankles and calves had swollen excessively. He meekly suggested to the pontiff that he should call a doctor.

"This is no affair of yours, Fra Faustino," ruled Pius XI, dismissing any further reference to his physical condition.

But in the circle of the papal intimates something had to be done. Cardinal Pacelli worried for days and finally succeeded this second time in inducing the Pope to let the doctor make an examination. Dr. Milani called. After the examination, he informed the cardinal that it was absolutely necessary for the Pope to retire to his bed to abstain from activity. He was suffering from defective circulation and arteriosclerosis, which was especially acute in the legs.

The call to duty still imposed itself upon Pius XI. He refused to take the doctor's advice and would not give up work.

"The Pope cannot be ill," he peremptorily told the physician. "The health of the Pope is in the hands of God who will call him from his labors in His own good time. We will continue to work until called."

Suffering Increases

Cardinal Pacelli and Dr. Malani consoled him in the fact that a period of rest would render him more fit for service.

"We ask God one thing," he replied to Cardinal Pacelli and Dr. Milani. "We pray God that we may be able to die working."

The physical suffering increased. During the month of December the daily torture prevented the thoroughly peaceful rest which Milani had hoped for. The patient slept little.

He was examined by Father Agostino Gemelli, famous as a physician and head of the Catholic University of Milan, who emerged from the presence of Pius XI shaking his head. It was apparent from his face that the situation was grave.

"We must be strong and courageous in this hour of great difficulty," lamented this eminent doctor as he sorrowfully embraced Mgr. Venini. "Pius XI is slowly passing away."

All through January his condition continued to give alarm.

At the end of January, Father Gemelli was again called in for consultation. The improvement astounded him.

"Pius XI is now out of danger," he announced exultingly to the prelates who had gathered to hear what he had to say.

"Now I can tell you that he may live for many years to come."

Wrote Encyclicals Now

But the Pope who never had sufficient hours in the day to satisfy his love for work was still confined to his bed, completely immobile.

The extent of his intellectual activity during this period was effectively measured by the unusual amount of mental work he achieved. The dynamic Pope conceived and wrote three long encyclicals on the arresting problems of the Church during those very times.

In February further substantial signs indicated that the Pope was passing from uncertainty to recovery. On February 7 he closed the International Eucharistic Congress in Manila, where Cardinal Dougherty officiated as papal legate, by broadcasting another message to the world. By the end of the month his strength increased.

During March, improvement continued. The pains diminished. On March 19, the feast of St. Joseph, for the first time in nearly four months, he was able to stand on his feet long enough to celebrate mass.

He told Dr. Milani that he desired to officiate personally at the pontifical mass in St. Peter's on Easter Sunday. This was only nine days away from the first day on which he stood up to say his own private mass. The physician, filled with misgivings, conferred with Cardinal Pacelli.

Cardinal and physician decided to show His Holiness that it would not be prudent for him to carry the heavy burden of the entire ceremony. Accordingly, Cardinal Pacelli advised the Pope to preside at the function but to appoint a cardinal to celebrate the mass.

Benediction Graceful

When it was officially announced that the Pontiff would preside at the Easter mass, jubilation spread throughout the whole of Roman Catholicism.

I had a seat in the diplomatic tribune. I watched the procession advance slowly down the central aisle. The Pope received a tremendous ovation. Bursts of applause greeted him all along the route. Even in the apse where royalty, aristocrats and diplomats were seated, continued waves of handclapping welcomed him. The Holy Father blessed the multitude with the same grace of movement which had always characterized this act.

To me Pius XI looked younger in his less fleshy face. An American priest near me asked what I thought of his appearance. I thought it not only promised hope of renewed strength but complete restoration to health.

There was no sign of weakness. The service proceeded with perfect regularity. After the mass, the Pope was carried to the sedia gestatoria down the central aisle.

When he had finally retired to his apartments, Cardinal Pacelli and Dr. Milani came to visit him. He was rejoicing and wore a contented and exulting smile.

"We are not one bit tired," he told them. "If we had known beforehand that we could have withstood the effort so well, we would have personally celebrated the mass and could have done so excellently."

But the Pope was not the strong man he once was.

He decided to move from Vatican City to Castelgandolfo on May 1. His intimate prelates tried to dissuade him from this plan for they thought it too early in the retarded spring season. But his mind was made up.

"One Must Serve"

On the day chosen a heavy hail storm swept the Roman Compagna, and in one last effort to deter this early transfer to the Alban hills a prelate suggested that he ought not to risk a relapse.

"A hail storm bring a relapse?" he countered, recalling the many hail storms on his Alpine climbs. "Why, there is nothing better to clear the air than a hail storm. The air is fresher and more buoyant. We will go."

Through the rain and hail of May 1, the papal automobile carried him to his summer villa. It rained for several consecutive days. He suffered no ill effects.

These months of illness demonstrated the spirit which generated his whole life, which dominated every act. We cannot but recall his own words when he unveiled the bust to his predecessor, Mgr. Ceriana, at the Ambrosian Library, 30 years previously. Then he summed up his philosophy of life in these words:

"One must serve with all one's time, all one's strength and all one's life."

So Help Us George Washington This Is the Truth!

An honest confession they say is good for the soul, we expect to prove today that it's good for business, too!

Once a year, on this, the birthday of the leading exponent of exposure, we bring out a lot of merchandise that just didn't "click," label it as such and clean it out. One man's meat is another man's poison . . . and because somebody didn't like the stripes in this shirt is no reason you won't like them. Also because the size and color assortment is shot in another group of merchandise doesn't always mean your size isn't there. If you're a good gambler (and what man or woman isn't) . . . it's going to be well worth your while to come to The Hecht Co. this morning. There's nuggets of values in these here aisles.
